CHAMBERLIN PLANE LANDS IN GERMANY; BREAKS WORLD RECORDS FOR DISTANCE

MARINES, CHEERING, ARRIVE IN TIENTSIN; DEFENSE INSPECTED

Some of the Survivors of Boxer Uprising Greet Force.

BUTLER AND DUNCAN ARE ON THE SCENE

American and British Generals Present—Chang's Troops to Remain in Peking.

Tientsin, June 5 (By A. P.).—Scenes reminiscent of the Boxer rising in 1900 were enacted on the British Bund tonight when the first detachment of American marines reached here from Taku. They had arrived at Taku on the transport Henderson earlier in the day. This is 30 miles down the river.

Many of the residents greeted the marines, including not a few who had undergone the Boxer siege. Brig. Gen. Smedley Butler, who had returned from a trip to Peking, where he conferred with the American Minister, inspected the marines when they landed.

Most of the marines never had left the ship since their embarkation in America, and were manifestly jubilant when they stepped ashore. They were in high spirits, lustily chanting, "Hail, Hail, the Gang's All Here," as the lighter tied up to the wharf. Further detachments will reach here tomorrow and Tuesday.

Maj. Gen. John Duncan, commanding the British Shanghai defense forces, has arrived to inspect the defenses of Tientsin, after which he will proceed to Peking to consult with the legation.

Chang Troops to Hold Peking.

Peking, June 5 (By A. P.).—Reports from Hankow that the northern troops of Marshal Chang Tso-Lin intend to withdraw from Peking are without foundation, it was stated today.

There have been no abnormal movements of troops on the railways and so far as known here no troops have crossed the Yellow River.

The military authorities are carefully watching the movements of troops in the Province of Shansi, where it is felt that the key to the military situation in north China is located.

Hankow, China, June 5 (By A. P.).—An appeal for funds for the relief of Chinese in the present civil war has been sent to the International Young Men's Christian Association at New York and the International Missionary Council at London signed by two Protestant Episcopal bishops and several missionaries

The appeal asks for $100,000 (Mexican) in behalf of the international independence unit which is cooperating with official Chinese associations for the relief of wounded. The appeal points out that 8,000 wounded already are in Hankow with large numbers arriving daily from the fighting areas, existing agencies are stated to be overwhelmed with work, that mission hospitals are enlarging their accommodations and staffs and that increased funds are needed urgently.

The appeal was signed by the Rt. Rev. Herbert L. Roots, American Protestant Episcopal Bishop of Hankow, Bishop John Holden of Kwangsi-Hunan, the Revs. Guttery and Battenbury and Dr. Gillison.

Confesses He Slew Girl and Her Mother

Jackson, Miss., June 5 (By A. P.).—Walter Burley, Jackson negro, confessed this afternoon to Jackson police officers at the Forest County jail at Hattiesburg, that he had slain Miss Martha Rees, 19 years old, and Mrs. O. S. Rees, at Jackson Friday morning. The confession, police said, was voluntary, and was heard by several witnesses.

Burley, a former employe of the Rees dairy farm, said he had planned the crime on Thursday. Burley was hurried from the Hattiesburg jail for an unnamed destination.

Missing Student Found, Wrists Tied, in River

Xenia, Ohio, June 5 (By A. P.).—The body of Frederick Adschead, 22, Stockport, England, special student at Antioch College near here, was found in the Little Miami River here today. Adschead disappeared May 27, leaving a note indicating he would not return.

College authorities said he had been ill for some time and had been feeling depressed. The body was decomposed. Its wrists were tied with a piece of rope.

Engine to Fight Fire High in Skyscraper

New York, June 5 (By A. P.).—If the Woolworth Building ever gets afire at the top, the city is prepared. It has a new fire engine that can shoot a stream as high as the biggest building.

MAN IN LAUNCH SAVES TWO CLINGING TO CANOE

Din on Bridge From Horns of Automobiles Directs Attention to Youths.

OVERTURNED IN SQUALL

Clinging to their capsized canoe in the Potomac River between the Highway and Railroad bridges shortly before dark yesterday, Lawrence Garver, 18 years old, 415 Shepherd street northwest, and Elmer B. Holland, 19 years old, 7707 Thirteenth street northwest, were rescued by Hartwell Balcom, of the Corinthian Yacht Club.

The canoe was overturned in the middle of the river by choppy waters and a stiff breeze. H. E. Tibbett and Herbert Taylor, bridge tenders on the Highway Bridge discovered the plight of the youths. Blowing their traffic whistles they stopped more than a hundred automobiles crossing the bridge.

When the motorists saw the overturned canoe they began blowing the horns on their machines. Balcolm, who resides at 1526 Seventeenth street northwest, was piloting his launch up the river, when his attention was attracted by the din on the bridge.

Spectators lining the bridge railing pointed to the canoe, and Balcolm turned his launch in that direction.

When he helped the young men into his boat they were almost exhausted. They were taken to the Yacht Club, where their clothing was dried, after they had been wrapped in blankets and sent home. Neither suffered any ill effects from the wetting.

One of the injured, Charles E. Atkinson, husband of the dead woman, was in a critical condition in a hospital tonight.

JUGOSLAVIA BREAKS WITH ALBANIA OVER ATTACHE'S ARREST

Belgrade's Charge and Legation Staff Have Left Tirana.

CRISIS HELD LIKELY IN RECENT DISPUTE

Controversy With Italy Also Was Centered at Scene of Present Rupture.

Belgrade, Jugoslavia, June 5 (By A. P.).— Diplomatic relations with Albania were broken last night, it is learned from a most reliable source.

The Jugosla charge d'affaires, it was learned, with the entire legation staff, left Tirana last night for Durazzo by way of Spalato.

The break, it was reported, was due to the failure of the Albanian government to accept conditions set forth by Jugoslavia demanding the release of an attache in Tirana, of the Jugoslav legation, who was recently arrested by the Albanian authorities.

Break Long Threatened.

A break between Albania and Jugoslavia has been threatened for some time. The latest problem, which is given in Belgrade dispatches as the cause of the break, was the arrest of M. Gjourachkovitch, an attache of the Jugoslav legation at Tirana, on a charge of espionage. The Jugoslav government protested the arrest of the man on the ground that he was entitled to diplomatic immunity, but the Albanian government contended that he was an Albanian citizen and not entitled to immunity.

On June 3 Belgrade dispatches said that the Jugoslav government had instructed its charge d'affaires at Tirana to leave the Albanian capital with his staff unless the imprisoned attache were released. A Zagreb dispatch of that same date said that Albania had demanded that Jugoslavia retract alleged undiplomatic language as a preliminary to the release of the attache.

Albania also has been the center of controversy between Jugoslavia and Italy, a controversy that came to a head with the signing of the treaty of Tirana between Italy and Albania.

Italy charged that Jugoslavia was encouraging revolts in Albania and was massing rtoops on the border, but this was denied and the affair lost its most acute aspect when the powers counseled moderation. The matter, however, has been simmering ever since.

Dog Bites Bearer Of Squawking Pig

Carrying a live pig through the street when a dog is at liberty is a mistake, Adrienne Street, colored, 35 years old, 84 G street southwest, learned yesterday. She was treated by Dr. H. G. Hadley, 1252 Sixth street southwest, after a stray dog nipped her instead of the pig she had in her arms.

With a newly purchased young "grunter," the woman was wending her way home along Second street southwest when the pig's cries attracted a stray canine. She attempted to kick off the barking dog, which continually jumped at the animal in her arms. She succeeded in holding the pig despite the fact that the dog bit her.

Ferdinand Forces Cabinet In Roumania to Quit Posts

Averescu Resigns; Prince Barbu Stirbey, Trusted Friend of Marie, to Be Premier—Blow to Carol's Chance to Rule Seen in Selection.

Bucharest, June 5. (By A. P.).—The Averescu ministry, which has been in power in Roumania since March 30, 1926, has resigned and Prince Barbu Stirbey, administrator of the royal domains, has been requested by King Ferdinand to form a national union ministry.

The selection of Prince Stirbey, who is a trusted friend of Queen Marie, and a brother-in-law of Ionel Bratiano, was in the nature of a political bombshell.

Vienna, June 5 (By A. P.).—Advices from Bucharest say that Gen. Averescu's resignation as Roumanian premier was on the demand of King Ferdinand.

During a cabinet meeting last night a representative of the king appeared and notified the premier that the formation of a national government had been intrusted to Prince Barbu Stirbey. The premier immediately presented his resignation.

The overthrow of the Averescu regime has caused a sensation in political circles in Bucharest, but was welcomed as ending the present uncertain conditions, the advices said.

Paris, June 5 (By A. P.). — Prince Carol's fortunes and his eventual chance at the Roumanian throne, if any, seem as hazy as ever to French political observers who are following with interest the situations created by the resignation of the Averescu ministry.

They regard the unstable Roumanian political situation as definitely on the road to solution now. Such stability, if attained, it is said privately, would make a coup d'etat or a popular demand for Carol's return unlikely.

King Ferdinand's supposed improvement in health also is cited as rendering difficult any discussion of recalling the former crown prince to a place in Roumania.

A shake-up in the political situation in Roumania has been expected for

LINDBERGH VAINLY SEEKS FOR GLIMPSE OF BELLANCA PLANE

Word of Success in Sea Flight Is Picked Up From Liner.

DINNER ABOARD SHIP BY ADMIRAL BURRAGE

Flier Inspects His Crated Plane Before Obeying "Order" to Sleep.

U. S. Cruiser Memphis, (By Wireless to The Associated Press) June 5.—Capt. Charles A. Lindbergh stood on the deck of the cruiser Memphis today scanning the heavens for a sight of the Bellanca plane Columbia when it was reported to be within 12 miles of him, but was unable to catch a glimpse of the New York-to-Europe fliers.

Capt. Charles A. Lindberg, en route to the United States from his epochal New York to Paris flight, today heard of the progress of the Bellanca plane Columbia, seeking new transatlantic honors, when a radio message from the S. S. Mauretania telling of the sighting of the Columbia, was intercepted by this American cruiser.

The intercepted radio message said that the Columbia circled the Mauretania 150 feet above the ship and then flew off to the east.

Baggage Is Delayed.

Lindbergh's luck came near to failing him yesterday, but turned up in the end, though causing him many anxious moments.

There was considerable delay about his precious baggage, which failed to arrive from Paris on time. The baggage consisted of many gifts contained in great packing cases, marked "fragile," boxes, suitcases, new leather bags and bundles of many kinds and sizes. The baggage was shipped from Paris by train, but did not reach Cherbourg in time, and was brought to the Memphis by a fast launch from the U. S. Destroyer Breck.

Capt. Lindbergh and Admiral Burrage heaved sighs of relief when it appeared, and the moment it was aboard, the "let's go" order was given, and the Memphis slipped the harbor buoy. Then for the first time the homeward bound pennant was unfurled. It contained 34 stars, one for each of the 34 officers, and in length measured 242 feet, or half a foot for each of the 484 men.

Dinner in Citadel.

On the hearty invitation of the admiral, the youthful aviator made himself completely at home.

"Take no orders from any one," remarked the admiral, and while Lind-

Russia Nationalizes Killing of Wolves

Moscow, June 5 (By A. P.).—The business of exterminating wolves has been nationalized in Russia.

A recent decree restricts wolf hunting to certain organizations. As a result, it is said, wolves are increasing by 80,000 to 85,000 yearly and destroyed 40,000 to 50,000 cattle last year.

Formerly wolf hunting was left to individuals and bounties were paid for killing them.

Maj. Dargue Arrives In Plane at Erie, Pa.

Maj. Dargue landed in Erie today. He was scheduled to remain here until tomorrow morning, when he was to hop off for Pittsburgh.

MACHINE DOWN ON LONG FLIGHT; MAKES NEW START FOR BERLIN; LAST SEEN IN AIR AT DORTMUND

HUGE CROWDS GATHER TO GREET ARRIVAL OF AMERICANS AT TEMPLEHOFER FIELD

American Ambassador on Hand to Extend Welcome—Capt. Lindbergh's Time for Continuous Trip Exceeded Long Before German Border Is Crossed by Daring Pair.

Ostend, Belgium, June 6 (A. P.).—The plane Columbia landed at Eisleben, Germany, at 9:30 o'clock this morning.

The Columbia was refueled and started on its way to Berlin, where it was expected to arrive within an hour.

New York, Monday, June 6 (By A. P.).—At 2:15 a. m. this morning, Eastern standard time, the exact location of the transatlantic plane Columbia was not definitely known. The last definite word about her, received at 10:55 p. m. Sunday night, was to the effect that she had passed Dortmund, 260 miles from Berlin, at 10:08 p. m., Eastern standard time, and inquired the way to Berlin.

Advices from Berlin received shortly after 2 a. m., Eastern standard time, this morning, were that there were fog and heavy rain in the German capital and that welcoming planes had failed to find the Columbia. Reports that the plane had been sighted over Berlin proved to be premature.

Sighted by Dortmund Observers.

Dortmund, Germany, Monday, June 6 (By A. P.).—Chamberlin passed over the Dortmund airdrome shortly after 4 a. m. He dropped very low, calling out: "To Berlin! To Berlin!"

The aviation police signaled the direction to Berlin.

Berlin (Monday), June 6 (By A. P.).—All the planes which went out from Berlin to meet the cross-ocean plane Columbia returned without finding the machine. This was attributed to a dense fog which was beginning to spread.

Eight meteorological stations in Brunswick reported this morning that a heavy rain was falling, and expressing the opinion that the Columbia was temporarily lost in the rain and fog.

The Columbia was sighted over Dortmund at 4:08 this morning.
sighted over Dortmund at 4:08 this morning.

(Dortmund is approximately 260 miles from Berlin.)

The Columbia was reported over Boulogne-Sur-Mer at midnight, heading for Cologne.

Boulogne-Sur-Mer is a French seaport on the English Channel and is about 420 miles distant from Berlin in a direct line.

The German Aerial League (Lufthansa) has received a report from private sources that the Columbia was sighted crossing the border at Crefeld. This is not confirmed. The weather has thickened so that the plane's course is obscured.

As daylight began to appear shortly after 4 o'clock, additional crowds surging toward Tempelhofer Field were so great that it was necessary to call out fresh police reserves. Rain had begun to fall.

Autos Head for Air Field.

At midnight there was a procession of automobiles to Tempelhofer Field, compared with which gala parades in imperial days seemed but a sprinkling. As traffic converged ever nearer to the Tempelhofer airdrome the crush become so compact that cars were able to move only by inches. It took an hour to cover half a mile.

As the night wore on, taxicabs were at a premium, and when they finally arrived at their destination there no longer was a question of parking cars; they were simply packed together without a ghost of a chance of getting out for hours.

The American Ambassador, Jacob Gould Schurman, accompanied by the executive members of his staff, motored to the airdrome about midnight, for all Germany believed that the Columbia was heading eastward, with Berlin as its destination.

The police assured the ambassador that ample protection would be given Chamberlin and Levine and that the waiting crowds would not be permitted to get within hailing distance of the plane after it landed.

The police also promised the ambassador free road for his motor with the aviators aboard, after the reception formalities were concluded.

Not Sure of Berlin.

New York, June 5 (By A. P.).—Report tonight that the Bellanca monoplane Columbia had passed Boulogne-Sur-Mer, definitely established for the first time that the course was being laid for Berlin.

The time of passing Boulogne, 6 o'clock Eastern standard time, indicated that Chamberlin and Levine would reach Berlin, a little more than 400 miles away, about 5 o'clock in the morning in Germany.

In passing Boulogne the fliers established that they had achieved the main purpose of their flight, to break the long distance flying record of the world. The record they set out to break was made by Charles Lindbergh in flying from New York to Paris.

Chamberlin and Levine were also approaching the endurance record of 51 hours, made by Chamberlin and Bert Acosta in the same plane, but were not expected actually to reach it. At Boulogne they had been in the air for 37 hours.

High Above Plymouth

Plymouth, England, June 5 (By A. P.) A plane, believed to be the Columbia, passed over Plymouth at 9:10 tonight, taking a course farther inland than that of Capt. Charles Lindbergh.

Hundreds of persons saw the monoplane, which was at a great height, pass over the city, traveling more than 100 miles an hour. A favorable gale was prevailing at the time.

An expert observer, who served with the antiaircraft section of the British air force during the war, reported sighting the Columbia over Plymouth about 9:10 p. m., traveling in an easterly direction. He estimated that her height was several thousand feet.

The plane also was seen from Keyhan, near the Devonport dock yard, flying in an easterly direction very fast and at a great height. Her speed was estimated at about 100 miles an hour.

Lindbergh Committee Plans Reception Details

Arrangements for Police Guard Augmented by "President's Own" Troop and Boy Scout Unit Provides Escort for Flier at Nation's Capital.

With the general outline of the program for welcoming Capt. Charles A. Lindbergh already agreed upon, the Washington reception committee will meet this morning to begin working out the details.

The committee, which is headed by John Hays Hammond, has worked with astounding speed since its creation last Thursday. Its task has been almost as great as that involved in a presidential inauguration, and yet it has completed the major part of it within a few days.

Every policeman and detective in the city will be called into service the day Capt. Lindbergh arrives, it was announced yesterday by Maj. Edwin B. Hesse and Inspector Henry G. Pratt, chief of detectives. The policemen detailed to the Washington Monument Grounds will be augmented by 125 soldiers and a troop of Boy Scouts.

The program for Saturday, the day of the Lone Eagle's arrival, is as follows:

He will debark from the Memphis at noon, and will be welcomed by the committee and the District Commissioners. The general public will not be allowed into the navy yard.

Escorted by the "President's Own," crack cavalry troop of Fort Myer, the machine bearing Capt. Lindbergh will move out of the navy yard and into Eighth street southeast. It will continue north on Eighth street to Pennsylvania avenue, where it will turn west and proceed to the Capitol Grounds. Circling the Capitol, it will go on to Peace Monument where it will become part of a parade of 2,000 soldiers, sailors and marines. At Fifteenth street, his machine will turn south and proceed to the Washington Monument Grounds.

In the presence of a crowd expected to exceed 100,000 at the Monument Grounds, President Coolidge will bespeak America's pride in Lindbergh and will pin the distinguished flying cross on his breast. The President's remarks and those of Lindbergh will be carried out to the crowd by amplifiers and to the Nation by radio.

The ceremony at the Monument Grounds is expected to start about 1 o'clock. After it is over, Capt. Lindbergh and his mother, Mrs. Evangeline Lindbergh, will ride to the temporary White House with President and Mrs. Coolidge. That evening the flier will be the guest at a state dinner in the Dupont Circle mansion.

Following this dinner the New York-to-Paris airman will go to the Willard Hotel, where the Minnesota Society will give a reception in his honor. Leaving the Willard Capt. Lindbergh will attend a reception to be given by the National Press Club.

Louis Ludlow, president of the National Press Club, announced last night that the club's reception to Capt. Lindbergh will be held in the United States

CHAMBERLIN'S TOWN LISTENING AT RADIO FOR NEWS OF FLIGHT

"Why Does He Go So Slow," Is Question; Seeking Distance Mark.

ONCE FRACTURED ARMS IN FALL FROM LADDER

Flying Days Nearly Ended When He Was Hurt in Plane Crash.

Denison, Iowa, June 5 (By A. P.).—The 3,500 persons who make up the population of this place stood by today, confident that Clarence—which is Denison's way of speaking of C. D. Chamberlin, pilot of the Columbia—eventually would land at the destination he decided upon.

There was little additional activity here, the regular Sunday program being followed by the townspeople, with the exception that groups gathered about radios and at the telegraph office.

"What's he going so slow for." Denison asked today when it heard that Clarence Chamberlin had passed Plymouth, England.

The answer was found in a letter from Mrs. Wylda Chamberlin, wife of the Columbia's pilot, to Chamberlin's parents, Mr. and Mrs. F. C. Chamberlin.

"Wylda wrote," Mrs. Max Moffitt, Clarence's sister said, "that Clarence plans to cruise the first part of his flight and when the gasoline load is lessened to speed up."

Seeks Greater Distance.

From this it was assumed here Chamberlin planned to outdistance Lindbergh but not better his flying time.

Between announcements of the development of the nonstop flight, they engaged in conversation of other days, which revolved about the pilot as a youngster and a World War veteran. Although there is little apparent anxiety even among those who knew him well as a youngster, born and reared here. It is not hard to find folks, who are willing to talk at length about the modest boy "who said little but did much."

Excepting of course, Chamberlin's immediate family, now in Omaha, watching closely the Associated Press reports of the flight, the man most interested is C. E. Humphrey, superintendent of schools here, who was principal of the high school when Clarence was a student.

Humphrey today described the lad of yesterday—the aviator of today—as "a modest, unassuming fellow with a grin that got him out of nearly all of the scrapes in which he became involved."

In fact, Humphrey declared, he knew of only one incident in Clarence's high school career, when he definitely found that the boy was at the bottom of the "devilment." That was one day when Clarence fixed up a solution of hydrogen sulphide and nearly ruined the morale of the school. It took Mr. Humphrey a full month to find out who was the culprit, Clarence's grin saving him from earlier suspicion.

"Most outstanding about Clarence," Mr. Humphrey told the Associated Press, "was his grin." That grin got Clarence out of a lot of trouble.

Most interesting perhaps of all the [illegible] told of Clarence is one about his [illegible]tune when he came home to visit af[illegible]is discharge from the Army. His fa[illegible] wanted him to help paint the ho[illegible]nd Clarence hied himself atop a la[illegible] to do his share. Something sli[illegible]d, the ladder or Clarence, and the avi[illegible]r—he had seen a lot of service te[illegible]g planes and instructing would-be pilots—and the ladder went tumbling to earth. The net result for Clarence was two broken arms.

Plane Crashes Into Wires.

Then there is the story of how his flying days came near being ended when he was competing in the 1925 international races at New York. His plane crashed into some telephone wires and Clarence was picked up with a broken leg and other injuries.

"You will never fly again," his doctor told him.

"I'll show you," Clarence replied.

If Father Chamberlin had had his way, Clarence would not now be flying in Europe. His father wanted him to follow his footsteps as a jeweler. Clarence tried the watch repairing business when he came back to Denison after his war service. But he had "higher" ambitions and went into commercial aviation, a field in which he has been engaged since that time.

During the war Clarence enlisted in the balloon service at Omaha. From there he was transferred to the aviation service at Rantoul, Ill.

He acted as test pilot and instructor at Kelly Field for a time, and the armistice found him at Hoboken, N. J., awaiting a ship which could take him to France.

His disgust at not reaching the war front was indicated by a card he sent to his parents. The entire message was one word—"Hell."

Denison has two reasons for celebrating November 11—Armistice Day and Clarence Chamberlin's birthday. He was born on that date, 1893, in this Iowa town, finished grade school here, was graduated from high school and the normal school here in 1912, and after attending Iowa State College at Ames for two years, returned to Denison in 1914 to open a tire and repair shop.

Chamberlin and Levine Circle Mauretania at Sea

Special to The Washington Post.

New York, June 5.—Late this afternoon the Chicago Tribune Press Service received the following radiogram from the Cunard Line's Mauretania:

"Passengers aboard the Cunard liner Mauretania had a thrilling Sunday afternoon, for shortly after 3 o'clock (summer time), the world's fastest liner caught up with and passed the U. S. S. Memphis, which could be plainly seen in the distance, shipping heavy seas, while the Mauretania cut through the waves so swiftly that practically no motion was felt. The Memphis had made 23 knots after leaving Cherbourg with Capt. Charles A. Lindbergh aboard, and the Mauretania will beat her to the American coast easily.

"Eighty minutes later came the biggest thrill of all. It approached as a speck in the air, then loomed larger and larger. It was Clarence Chamberlin's plane the Columbia, and we were 340 miles from Land's End. Hats, books and umbrellas were thrown wildly in the air and the plane descended to within 150 feet of the ship's mast and its large markings 'NX-357-140' put all doubts aside as to whose machine it was. The cheering of the passengers and crew became frantic.

"As though out for an afternoon joy ride, Chamberlin calmly made a complete circuit of the ship, coolly examined her name, and then went off to the eastward at a terrific speed, and magnificently and it seemed practiin three minutes' time was out of sight.

"The plane's engines were working cally a foregone conclusion that the Columbia will equal, if not beat, the record set by Capt. Lindbergh."

The Mauretania's wireless relayed the news of the wonderful spectacle to Lindbergh on the cruiser Memphis, at his request, the Memphis being out of sight of the Columbia over the edge of the horizon.

It was 3:30, Greenwich mean time, when the Bellanca plane swooped to our deck levels and circled the ship. The thrilled passengers and crew lined the rails, cheering as the plane dipped in salute and then proceeded eastward. The weather is clear and the wind favorable. Those aboard the Mauretania had earlier witnessed Capt. Lindbergh's departure from Cherbourg for Washington.

LINDBERGH LEARNS OF BELLANCA FLIGHT

bergh smiled his appreciation, he said he would do his best not to run foul of any of the ship's regulations.

He was the admiral's dinner guest, along with Benjamin Mahoney, designer of the plane, and the correspondents, the dinner being served in the forward citadel, or six-gun compartment beneath the foremast and the bridge. The admiral took occasion to remark that after dinner the birdman could sleep as long as he liked and have breakfast at any hour he chose.

Realizing that the youth was very tired after his two weeks of ceremony and celebration, the admiral arranged so that the dinner was over early, and Lindbergh turned in for the beginning of his big sea rest, to which he had been looking forward. He remarked that the admiral was a man after his own heart for suggesting "one great sleep."

Ready to Get Sleep.

"That's an order," said he, "and I am going to bed right away, for fear you might change your mind."

Prior to this the airman had made a hurried trip to the midship deck to be sure his monoplane was safe. It was packed in two huge cases. One of them containing the motor and other accessories was as big as a bungalow. Admiral Burrage already had requested Lindbergh to give him this great packing box as a souvenir of the voyage and for use as a bungalow. The monoplane rests between two catapults both holding seaplanes belonging to the ship.

Numerous invitations to dinners and all kinds of other entertainment are already coming by radio for Capt. Lindbergh from cities, towns and individuals. New York leads to date.

There were also messages of good will from the captain and passengers of the Mauretania and other ships.

Chamberlin Justice In His Adopted Town

Teterboro, N. J., June 5 (By A. P.).—This little municipality of 20 citizens, where Clarence D. Chamberlin, pilot of the Bellanca transatlantic plane, sits as justice of the peace, today began to plan a celebration if the flight is successful.

"We'll give him a royal welcome," said Edward Shafer, borough clerk and chief officer of the borough in the absence of Mayor Hollister.

The people have watched Chamberlin since he began to fly here several years ago and express the greatest confidence in his ability.

In his five years as justice of the peace, Chamberlin has not heard a case.

Chamberlin Gauges Fuel By His Hearing

New York, June 5 (By A. P.).—The New York Times says Clarence D. Chamberlin is depending on his sense of hearing to tell him when the fuel supply in the main gasoline tank runs low. He had no gasoline gauge installed in his tank.

Before taking off on his transatlantic hop, Chamberlin was approached by a representative of an instrument manufacturing company regarding a gauge.

"Why should I install a gas gauge?" the flier inquired. "When I want to know how much gas I have left all I have to do is tap the tank. I can tell by the sound what the gas level is."

Cable Sent to Berlin By Mrs. Chamberlin

New York, June 5 (By A. P.).—When Clarence D. Chamberlin arrives in Berlin, he will find a message from his wife congratulating him on his flight.

Mrs. Chamberlin, when she learned that her husband and Charles A. Levine in their plane, Columbia, had crossed into Germany, sent him the following cablegram:

"Hail Columbia and my wonderful boy and Mr. Levine. Love and kisses. Will join you soon as possible.

"WILDA."

A monoplane bearing the numerals 140. distinguishing marks of the Columbia, was sighted over Padstow, North Cornwall, by coast guards at 8:45 p. m. tonight, flying well and heading southeast. A strong west-northwest wind was blowing.

Conditions Held Favorable.

Torquay, Devonshire, England, June 5 (By A. P.).—The American transatlantic plane Columbia was reported off Plymouth about 9:10 o'clock, London daylight time, tonight.

The Columbia's course apparently was straight up the channel. Previously she had been reported off the Scilly Islands at 8 o'clock and seemed to be sailing along rapidly, aided not a little by a high northwest following wind.

There was considerable fog during the day and the weather was not clear tonight, being somewhat cloudy, but conditions seemed favorable for continued good progress.

Lands End, England, June 5 (By A. P.).—The local radio station late today reported receiving the following message from the steamship Transylvania: "At 19:20 Greenwich time (8:20 p. m. London daylight time) an airplane marked 140 New York passed overhead in latitude 50.27, longitude 05.48, apparently going well."

The message from the Transylvania said that the plane was heading due east.

Seen by Mauretania.

S. S. Mauretania, June 5 (By A. P.). A monoplane believed to be the Bellanca transatlantic flier Columbia was sighted today about 360 miles off the southwest coast of England at 15:30 Greenwich time (10:30 a. m. eastern standard time).

The position of the ship was 49.23 north latitude and 15.08 west longitude. Flying conditions were excellent.

The plane, which bore the markings as made out from the ship, N-357-140, circled the vessel and then continued eastward.

The plane was flying east-northeast when she resumed her flight. The plane was flying fine.

This would indicate that the plane was heading in the direction of southern England, thus increasing the possibility that Berlin was her destination.

New York, June 5 (By A. P.).—Wireless report from the steamer Mauretania that the Bellanca monoplane Columbia had been sighted off the coast of France at 10:30 o'clock, Eastern standard time, this morning was the first word from the transatlantic fliers since they flew over Cape Race, Newfoundland, and headed eastward out to sea at 6:20 o'clock last night.

The Mauretania report seemed to place the plane at 10:30 about 300 miles west of Brest. This means that up to that time 17 hours and 10 minutes had elapsed since leaving Newfoundland, and that about 1,600 miles had been covered of the 1,900-mile jump across the ocean.

Charles Lindbergh flew the entire 1,900 miles in 17 hours and 15 minutes, indicating that Chamberlin and Levine at noon were about three hours behind his schedule.

Close to Markings.

Although the markings on the plane reported by the Mauretania were read as N-357-140, which are not the markings of the Columbia, they are so near the Columbia's marks as to indicate the plane was the Columbia, but that the markings could not be plainly seen from the ship and were misread. The Columbia was marked NX 237 on both wings and fuelage, and 140 on the fuselage.

By traveling directly eastward from the point 360 miles off the Scilly Islands, where the Mauretania sighted her, it was estimated the Columbia should reach Brest about 2:30 p. m. eastern standard time. If the course should be continued straight east Paris should be reached about 6:30. From there the course could be laid northeastward for a five to six-hour run to Berlin or southeast for a six to seven hour trip to Rome.

FIRE RECORD.

NOT A BIT WORRIED ABOUT CHAMBERLIN, HIS MOTHER STATES

Her Only Fears Felt Before Take-Off; Parents Eagerly Watch Bulletins.

EXPECTING SON HOME AFTER CELEBRATIONS

Did Not Know of His Start Until Reading Accounts in Newspapers.

Omaha, Nebr., June 5 (By A. P.).—"I'm not worried in the least. I was nervous before he started, but after he took off the worries ceased."

This was the expression tonight of Mrs. E. C. Chamberlin, mother of Clarence Chamberlin, who, with Charles Levine, backer of the flight, is shooting toward Berlin in his Bellanca monoplane, Columbia.

Mr. and Mrs. Chamberlin hovered over the Associated Press wire throughout the day and evening, watching dispatches telling of the progress of their son's flight.

"It's simply wonderful," said the mother. "I know he'll make it, and I'm not worried in the least."

Boyhood Friend Watches.

"Of course we don't know details of the flight, but the bulletins indicate that he'll make it," the father said. Mr. Chamberlin is a jeweler at Denison, Iowa, birthplace and scene of Clarence's boyhood and early manhood.

With the Chamberlins is George M. Seemann, boyhood friend of the transatlantic flier. Seemann, who now resides in Omaha lived next door to the Chamberlins at Denison for many years.

The Chamberlins expect their boy back home "as soon as the celebrations are over."

"Of course his plans are indefinite now," said Mr. Chamberlin. "I know Clarence once told me he wanted to get in the Ford reliability tour in July but he didn't say he was going. I think he will be back in Denison before many weeks. Then he will start out again from there."

Mrs. Chamberlin wanted to see her son hop off, but the uncertainty as to time of departure and the fact that "Clarence was so busy," precluded the arrangement.

Both Want to Go East.

"We both want to go to New York when he returns to this country, however," she added.

Mrs. Chamberlin has not seen her son since 1920. Mr. Chamberlin last saw Clarence in 1923 when he went East.

"Clarence doesn't write home very much," Mrs. Chamberlin said. "He's not a good correspondent. However, his wife keeps us in touch with him. Since arrangements started for the flight, however, we have not heard from her."

The Chamberlins did not know that their son had hopped off on his eventful flight until they saw accounts of it in the newspapers. Clarence told them, Mr. Chamberlin said, that the press would keep us well informed as to the progress of the flight, including the hop-off.

300 Killed or Hurt In Cracow Explosions

(Special Cable Dispatch.)

Cracow, June 5.—Three hundred persons have been killed or injured in a series of munitions magazine explosions which began here this noon. As the explosions began while people were leaving church a stampede of the population resulted, increasing the number of victims. Already 297,000 pounds of ecrasite, a high explosive, have gone up in the blast, which is still continuing tonight.

Every window in this city of more than 400,000 inhabitants has been blown out. The property damage is enormous. The disaster is the worse Poland has experienced since it became a republic.

Disabled Veterans Outing Guests Today

Approximately 900 veterans will attend the annual automobile outing for disabled veterans in local hospitals to be given by the Veterans of Foreign Wars June 19. The outing will be held on the estate of Dr. P. M. Rixey, surgeon general and White House physician during the McKinley and Roosevelt administrations, at Rixy, Va.

Charles Kohen, chairman of the department hospitalization committee of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, is director of the outing. The Washington Boys Independent Band, directed by James L. Kidwell, will furnish the music. More than 350 automobiles will be needed to accommodate those who will wish to go, Mr. Kohen stated.

PURCHASE TO EXTEND OREGON TRUNK ROAD

Shevlin-Hixon Co.'s Line to Be Bought, R. Budd Announces.

St. Paul, Minn., June 5 (By A. P.).—Purchase of the Shevlin-Hixon Co.'s Railroad, extending 25 miles southwest of Bend, Oreg., will be the first step in the extension of the Oregon Trunk Road from that city to Klamath Falls, Oreg.

This was announced here today by Ralph Budd, president of the Great Northern Railway, which has taken over alone the extension of the Oregon Trunk, as the other joint owner—the Northern Pacific—has declined to participate.

The Great Northern's board of directors, which has formally approved the extension by the Great Northern alone, also has approved the purchase of the Shevlin-Hixon Road, which virtually follows the route of the Oregon Trunk survey, Mr. Budd said.

In a statement, prepared before he departed for New York, Mr. Budd said the purchase of the Shevlin-Hixon Road "will advance the Klamath Falls extension program by several months."

Sam Bernard Paid Actors' Tributes

New York, June 5 (By A. P.).—Famous actors and others prominent in the theatrical world gathered at Temple Emanuel today to pay their last tribute to Sam Bernard, veteran comedian, who died May 18, aboard the liner Columbus on his way to Europe.

Dr. Nathan Krass conducted the funeral services, which were under the direction of the Jewish Theatrical Guild.

Will Rogers Hates Use of Word Lucky Regarding Airman

Special to The Washington Post.

Claremore, Okla., June 5.—I hate societies. That's what is the matter with this country now, it is societied to death. But I would like to organize one, and will even go so far as to be sponsor for it. It is called Society Against Any Newspaper in America having a headline, or allowing to be used in the article, the word lucky in regard to Mr. Lindbergh's name. It is the politest way of lessening the glory of his feat that they could possibly think up.

Yours,
WILL ROGERS.

G. W. UNIVERSITY SENIORS HEAR BACCALAUREATE

St. John's Pastor Addresses George Washington Students in Corcoran Hall.

400 MEN HEAR SERMON

Advances in religious thought are equal to any that science has made, the Rev. Robert Johnston, of St. John's Episcopal Church, declared yesterday in his baccalaureate sermon delivered before 400 George Washington University seniors in Corcoran Hall.

The university is the chief hope of delivery of religion from the peculiar conditions of the present, Dr. Johnston said. He likened the university to religion. Their purpose is the twofold one of destroying prejudice and ignorance, he declared.

"Those who teach religion are familiar with the latest developments in psychology, history, philosophy and the like, but they are ignorant of developments and changes in the teaching of religion," he said. "You are the hope of religion in the exercise and devotion of the mind to the stamping out of ignorance and prejudice."

President William Mather Lewis led in responsive readings. Numbers were sung by Maj. Charles Trowbridge Tittman. The class will graduate Wednesday night when the 106th commencement will be held by the university in the Washington Auditorium. At that time Dr. Samuel P. Capen, chancellor of the University of Buffalo, will address the graduates.

AUTO DRIVER HELD IN HIT-AND-RUN CASE

Motorist Arrested Near Scene of Accident After Auto Is Abandoned.

Accused of abandoning the automobile he was driving after running down and injuring a man, Boyd H. Enke, 26 years old, 1335 Tenth street northwest, was arrested yesterday at the Second precinct on a charge of fleeing the scene of an accident. Two weeks ago, Enke was arrested at the same precinct following a liquor chase and was charged with violating the prohibition law and reckless driving.

Samuel M. Biron, 69 years old, 1218 Ninth street northwest, was crossing Seventh and M streets northwest when he was struck and knocked down by an automobile. He was treated at Sibley Hospital for lacerations to the arms, legs and head. Witnesses told police that the driver of the car abandoned the vehicle a block from the scene.

Patrolmen H. H. Clark and N. T. Imlay arrested Enke a short distance from the scene. After questioning, police declare, Enke admitted driving and abandoning the car but declared he was ignorant of running the man down. He was freed in $500 cash collateral. Enke is at liberty on bail in the liquor violation charges. During the chase of Enke, a pedestrian and a motorist were slightly injured. Police say he was captured after he abandoned the car he was driving and escaped through a house in Fifth street northwest.

The 1927 Lenten offering, which was announced from the platform of the Academy of Music today by dioceses, totaled $546,642, an increase of about $55,000 over last year's gift.

John Gardner Murray, Bishop of Maryland, and presiding bishop of the Episcopal Church in the United States, and the Rt. Rev. Walter T. Overs, former Bishop of Liberia.

Dr. Foshag Off Today On Survey in Mexico

Continuing a survey of Mexican mineral deposits begun last year by the Smithsonian Institution and the Harvard Mineralogical Museum, Dr. W. F. Foshag will depart today for Mexico, proceeding directly to the Las Chispas mine in the State of Sonora.

Although many of the Mexican mines were yielding gold and silver to the Toltecs, when the Spanish Conquistadores came to this continent 400 years ago, and have procured unceasingly since, a systematic description of the minerology and geology never has been given.

BRITISH REJOICING AT FLIGHT SUCCESS; NEWS IS CHEERED

Course of the Bellanca Was Held to Be Laid to German Capital.

BULLETINS ARE HAILED AS THEY ARE RECEIVED

Plain Markings Borne by the Columbia Prove an Aid in Identification.

London, June 5 (By A. P.).—Wireless reports tonight indicated that the American transatlantic plane, Columbia, piloted by Clarence D. Chamberlin with Charles A. Levine, backer of the flight, had successfully completed her transatlantic flight.

At 8:45 p. m., London daylight time, the Columbia was reported over Padstow, North Cornwall, heading southeast, while at 9:10 the plane was reported off Plymouth, heading apparently straight up the middle of the English Channel right over the steamer track on a course which would take her straight in the direction of Berlin, although the wind was more favorable for a flight to Rome. Previously the plane had been reported in the vicinity of Lands End.

The report of the plane's presence in the vicinity of Lands End came from the steamer Transylvania, stating that a plane bearing the numerals 140 and the words "New York"—distinguishing marks of the Columbia—had passed overhead going well.

The first report that the plane had reached a point off the coast of Europe came at 4:40 p. m., London daylight time, when the outward-bound Mauretania, 360 miles at sea, reported that the Columbia had circled the vessel and had then sailed off to the east, heading in the direction of the English Channel.

This message from the Mauretania, which was picked up at several points, also was picked up by the United States light cruiser Memphis, which is bearing Capt. Charles A. Lindbergh home from his own epochal New York-Paris flight of two weeks ago.

Patience Rewards Few

Comparatively few of the many thousands of persons in the southern section of the British Isles who kept keen lookout all afternoon and well into the long evening twilight for the approach of the Bellanca plane Columbia, piloted by Clarence D. Chamberlin, had their patience rewarded. All the Irish coast stations, the South England ports and the coast guard stations were on the watch, and their expectancy was at quite as high a pitch as for Lindbergh's appearance.

Weather conditions on this side, however, were much less favorable than when Capt. Lindbergh flew into vision after conquering the Atlantic single-handed. The sky was overcast and toward evening a slight rain set in.

The London populace today was a holiday crowd, ready to be interested in anything as sensational as another Atlantic adventure, especially with the added interest of a hatless man jumping into the monoplane as though by a spontaneous afterthought to brave the risks of the long flight across the ocean.

There was little hope of catching a passing glimpse of the bold airmen, but for the reason that about every point in Europe has been named as the possible destination of the Columbia, it was felt that anything might happen without the least surprise.

Rejoice at Success.

And when in the evening radio reports told the glad tidings that the Columbia was sighaed 360 miles off the Scillys, and then, later was entering the channel, there were great rejoicings in the West End of London, where the news became known, and expressions of confidence were numerous that the Columbia would even surpass the Lindbergh performance so far as distance is concerned.

Keeping well in the track of ocean liners, Chamberlin seemed to be making a direct compass course to Berlin, and from the time he was first reported by the Mauretania, his course was easily followed to the Scillys, then Cornwall and up the channel.

After the Mauretania's sighting of the Columbia's approach to the coast, there was a long interval. Then suddenly flashed out of the air the announcement from the steamer Transylvania that a monoplane with the Columbia's markings flew over the steamer not far from Land's End, well inside the mouth of the English Channel.

This fixed the conviction that Chamberlin had undoubtedly conquered the Atlantic and the added information that he was going strong gave confidence that he and his companion Levine might pierce well into the interior of Europe before their fuel gave out.

A little later, about 9:10 o'clock, the fliers were reported off Plymouth, still heading up the channel, leading experts to believe that Berlin actually was their destination. When last actually sighted the Columbia was flying at a great height and still heading due east, with visibility virtually nil.

DR. ABRAHAM ZINGHER ASPHYXIATED IN DOZE

Noted Bacteriologist Helped to Perfect the Schick Test for Diphtheria.

New York, June 5 (By A. P.).—Abraham Zingher, noted bacteriologist who helped perfect the Schick test for diphtheria, was asphyxiated today when he dozed in his laboratory while conducting research into the Dick test for scarlet fever. The gas tube to a burner over which he was heating a test tube became disconnected as he slept.

Dr. Zingher's body was found in a chair before a laboratory table at the Willard Parker Hospital with an open notebook containing notes of his latest experiment lying before him.

Doctors at the hospital said that when Dr. Bela Schick came to this country from Vienna Dr. Zingher collaborated with him in perfecting the diphtheria preventive which became known as the Schick test. At the time of Dr. Zingher's death, they said, he was working to apply the scarlet fever serum discovered by Dr. George Dick and his wife, Dr. Gladys Dick, of the University of Chicago, to practical use on a large scale. He was also at work on serums for the treatment of measles and rheumatism.

Paris Papers Praise Chamberlin's Feat

Paris, June 6 (By A. P.).—The second crossing of the Atlantic by Americans is blazoned by all the Paris newspapers as a feat of great glory. The Columbia's success is accepted as a fact.

Although the time is slower than Capt. Lindbergh's, the two-man mystery jump excites renewed homage to American courage, enterprise and tenacity.

Chamber of Commerce Building, on Lafayette Square. The chamber offered the building to the club because it was feared that the present quarters of the club are too restricted in size to serve for such a function.

Amplifiers will be installed so that crowds outside the Chamber of Commerce Building may hear the proceedings. The music and speeches also will be broadcast by radio, over one of the longest hook-ups ever undertaken.

The National Press Club's program will include a number of interesting features, which will be announced later It is expected that Postmaster General New and Secretary of State Kellogg will fill in part of the time before the arrival of Capt. Lindbergh, and there will be artists from New York and elsewhere for early numbers to keep the crowd entertained. It is expected that Capt. Lindbergh will arrive at the Chamber of Commerce Building about 9:45 p. m.

Lindbergh's financial backers reside; Mr. Armstrong from Los Angeles, where his plane started on its epochal flight, and Mr. Markham from the aviator's home State, Minnesota.

To Dine With Coolidge.

On Sunday Lindbergh and Mrs. Lindbergh probably will attend church service with President and Mrs. Coolidge. After that Lindbergh will go to Arlington National Cemetery to place a wreath on the tomb of the Unknown Soldier. Returning from Arlington he will motor up Sixteenth street to Walter Reed Hospital, where he will mingle with the sick and wounded soldiers and veterans.

It is expected that the famous "Avenue of the Presidents" will be lined with spectators as the young airman journeys out to the hospital.

The Missouri Society, composed of natives of the State that now claims Lindbergh as its own, is anxious to have Capt. Lindbergh as its guest while he is here. Charles P. Keyser, veteran correspondent of the St. Louis Globe-Democrat, has been appointed by the society to try and make arrangements for a quiet reception in the flier's honor.

Mr. Keyser said last night that the transatlantic flier's time seemed to have been exhausted for Saturday, and that, therefore, the only chance the Missouri Society would have to greet him would be on Sunday.

Backers To Greet Flier.

Mr. Keyser was notified yesterday that Harry Hall Knight and the other St. Louis men who backed Capt. Lindbergh's flight were coming on here to greet the youngster. Frank W. Carter, chairman of the St. Louis reception committee, and other prominent citizens of the city, also are coming here, according to the message received by Mr. Keyser.

Although it was announced Friday that Capt. Lindbergh would not leave this city until Tuesday, it is now almost a certainty that he will get away Monday morning.

Washingtonians and visitors who expect to see the Eagle in the air will have to get up early that morning, for it is expected that he will take off about 6 o'clock in the morning. In view of what he did over Paris, it is expected that Lindbergh will do a bit of cavorting in the sky before he straightens out for New York.

This may not be the last opportunity that Washington will have to see the Spirit of St. Louis, however, for there is a strong probability that the now historic plane will be turned over to the Smithsonian Institution here, to become part of the world's greatest collection of famous planes.

FERDINAND FORCES CABINET TO RESIGN

some time, chiefly because of party differences that had been developing. On May 31, dispatches from Roumania said that King Ferdinand had signified a desire for a national union ministry and for that reason had commissioned the chief of the royal household to interview the various party leaders.

Ionel Bratiano, the former premier, expressed the opinion that a neutral statesman should preside over the new cabinet while the various parties called caucuses to discuss their representation in the new ministry.

Bratiano, who has been reported at odds with Gen. Averescu for some time, is reputed to be hostile to former Crown Prince Carol, who is now in exile in Neuilly, near Paris. The apparent return to active power by Bratiano, as indicated by the appointment of his brother-in-law, Prince Stirbey, would seem seriously to interfere with Carol's prospects for an early return to favor, a political question that has assumed the greatest importance because of the king's state of health.

ITALY IN READINESS TO LAND COLUMBIA AT CIAMPINO FIELD

Large Caproni Machines to Guide Americans if They Headed for Rome.

PREPARATIONS MADE TO PROTECT PLANE

Public and Officials Show Keen Interest in News of the Flight.

Ciampino Airfield, Italy, June 5 (By A. P.).—One hundred and fifty officers and men of the aeronautical service were putting the finishing touches on the preparations today for the hoped-for arrival of the Bellanca plane with Clarence D. Chamberlin and Charles A. Levine on board at this field during the early hours tomorrow morning. Everyone of them will be assigned to a post as soon as the first word of sighting the plane in the vicinity of Europe is received, and will stand by throughout the night until the arrival here or notification that the plane is not coming.

The Italian minister of aeronautics took no chances of a repetition of the confusion at the moment of Capt. Lindbergh's arrival at Le Bourget, and there were strict orders that no one except high staff officers or officials carrying a special ticket of authorization be permitted within 100 yards of the machine after its arrival.

"I cannot answer for the safety of Chamberlin and Levine from the enthusiasm of the crowds," one of the officers of the field declared to the Associated Press correspondent this afternoon, "but I can guarantee that their machine will not be touched until they get good and ready to allow it to be handled.

"The general public will be rigorously excluded from the airfield, and only persons holding special tickets from the governmental authorities will be permitted to pass the sentries even on the roads leading to the field, and the fields adjoining it will be carefully guarded."

Orders are Succinct.

The officers of the field have orders couched in typically succinct military language to do everything possible to facilitate the arrival of "the foreign airplane expected tonight."

When, and if, the Columbia is sighted in the direction of Italy, several large Caproni machines and a squadron of pursuit planes will go out to meet it. When the greeting planes succeed in making contact with the Americans they will show signal lights and fire signal shots and will lead the Columbia to Ciampino. The big Capronis will remain in the air until it is assured that the landing of the Columbia has been carried out successfully.

Should the plane arrive while it is still dark, 30 men have been entrusted to keep the field flooded with huge lights and scour the skies with searchlights. This field has been chosen instead of Centocelle not only because of its superior facilities, but because large wireless antennae near Centocelle present great danger to fliers not familiar with the ground.

Weather reports from all over central Italy show chilly and gusty winds, but with west winds probably favorable to the fliers. Careful preparations for guiding the Bellanca or affording an emergency landing ground have been made at all the airfields along the coast from Rome to the French frontier. These include Furbara, Orbettello, Pisa, Coltana, Sarzana, Grottaglia and Rapallo, with Turin and Alessandria, somewhat to the east of the likely course.

Searchlights are Guides.

Rome, June 5 (By A. P.).—A chain of powerful searchlights scouring the heavens and extending from the northernmost frontiers as far as Naples will act as guides for the Bellanca plane Columbia if its pilot, Chamberlin, decides to fly over the Alps into Italy. Orders to this effect were issued early this morning by Signor Balbo, undersecretary for aviation, on receiving what he considered semiofficial information that the American fliers will probably attempt to reach the Eternal City.

Every airdrome and airport the length and breadth of the land has urgent instructions to prepare to lend every assistance within its power to the Americans. The fields of northern Italy, in particular those lying near Mont Cenis Pass, which is the easiest route from France, has everything in readiness to come down in Italy before reaching the goal, Rome.

The prefects of the provinces and the podestas of the towns have been asked by the central authorities to spread the word among the population, even the peasantry in out-of-way places of the impending event, urging them to report immediately the sighting of anything that seems to be a plane.

Further preparation for guaranteeing the most efficient nocturnal signaling will be put into effect as later reports of the progress of the machine are available. If the Columbia reaches Rome, the field prepared for its landing is that at Ciampino, about eight miles from the city limits. Ciampino is used for large Caproni machines and dirigibles, whereas Centocelle, originally considered as the better landing place, is the home field of lighter craft.

The change was made because of the greater size of Ciampino, which is probably one of the most beautifully situated fields in the world, nestling in the plain of the Roman "campagna" in the direction of Naples, with the Pontine marshes sweeping toward the Tyrrhenian Sea in one direction, and the Alban Hills, dotted with world famous towns, such as Erascati, in the other direction.

Crowds Watch Bulletins

Bulletins posted at the newspaper offices today and in the principal squares attracted great crowds who had gathered to celebrate the anniversary of the granting of the Italian constitution in 1848. The bulletins intimated that the Bellanca plane was on its way to Italy. Most of the forenoon the authorities were occupied with the holiday ceremonies, the most notable of which was a review of the garrison by the king, but Signor Balbo and his assistants at the ministry of aeronautics forsook the official functions about 11 o'clock and got into touch with the northern Italian air fields.

The personnel of the Ciampino Field was heavily strengthened, while the police also took steps to insure order among the crowds who are expected to gather at the field. Though the weather was chilly, with a brisk wind, and the ground soggy from a heavy rainstorm, accompanied by thunder and lightning last night, there were distinct signs of clearing by the afternoon. If the clouds disappear, the airplane will be aided by moonlight over central Italy.

Premier Mussolini personally has interested himself in the preparations to greet the fliers, and it is probable that he will be present at Ciampino several hours before the expected arrival of the Columbia, which, however, would hardly be before tomorrow morning.

AIRWAYS IN FRANCE AND FIELDS AGLEAM TO GUIDE BELLANCA

Lights Show the Way to Get to Berlin or Rome, as Aviators Choose.

SKYROCKETS ORDERED SENT UP AS AN AID

Maj. Yount, of the American Embassy, Asks Aviation Men to Cooperate.

Paris, June 5 (By A. P.).—All of France's aerial signals were ordered lighted tonight to show the pilot of the Bellanca plane the way to anywhere he wants to go. The world's greatest searchlight on Mont Valerein, outside of Paris, and three well lighted air lanes were ready for the Columbia to come to Paris, or go to Berlin or Rome.

Le Bourget Field, where Capt. Charles A. Lindbergh landed, was ready for another long, cool, night vigil, and every other air field in France was prepared to receive the second contingent of American transatlantic fliers.

When the Bellanca comes in from the west, if it so happens, intermittent parachute rockets from Le Bourget will be visible for many miles and illuminate Europe's largest air field.

All along the coast the naval authorities have instructed the lighthouse and emergency signal keepers to have their lamps trimmed and burning. The main air lane lighted is along the regular commercial route between London and Paris.

If the Bellanca wishes to veer northward toward Berlin, the French also have airmen's sign posts on the path from St. Quentin northeast of Valenciennes, where the regular Berlin air path could be picked up after a short distance is traversed in the same direction. If, however, the destination is Mussolini's home town, then the fliers may treat Paris like a by-station and follow the lights down to Marsielles, and then jump over to Italy.

The French government like a good host is all ready for its guests of the air, just as it was for Lindbergh. When Maj. Barton K. Yount, assistant military attache of the American Embassy, learned that there had been no requests for lights or airfield preparation, he passed the Sunday afternoon visiting the government's aviation officials, suggesting to them that it would be nice if France could be lighted tonight.

The French authorities, although they had not received any official request, were on deck at the ministry, nothwithstanding this was Whitsuntide, and most Frenchmen go to the races or to the country for a holiday. Shortly the authorities had orders issued ready for execution if definite news came that the Bellanca plane had been sighted.

Maj. Yount had suggested to the Bellanca people, as he had to the other ocean jumping entrants, that they communicate with the French Ambassador at Washington the day before they intended to take off.

The French authorities here, however, said they had heard nothing but nevertheless they had read the newspapers and would do everything possible to help the fliers.

The government also instructed the police authorities to keep their eyes open and have an adequate force at Le Bourget to handle the crowd, but as the uncertainty increased as to where the Columbia was headed for, it appeared improbable that there would be any great crush at Le Bourget, if the New Yorkers decided to stop off there.

FRENCH FLIERS MAY LIVE IN LABRADOR, NURSE SAYS

Impossible to Receive News From Interior Now, She Explains.

SEARCH THERE IS SEEN

Battle Harbor, Labrador, June 5 (By A. P.).—If the French aviators, Nungesser and Coli, by remote chance made a landing in the interior of Labrador on their transatlantic flight which ended so mysteriously last month with the men's disappearance, it may be late in June or July until they can be heard from, in the opinion of Lelah M. Sitterly, nurse in charge of the Battle Harbor district.

As an indication of the difficulties in communication in Labrador, Miss Sitterly, who has just come from the interior, said that it has taken five days for a message regarding the French aviators to reach her at a post only 20 miles from Battle Harbor.

"The prospects of finding the French transatlantic fliers in Labrador at this season are extremely poor," Miss Sitterly told the Associated Press. "Labrador is hilly, from a mountainous interior to rocky cliffs along the coast. The thinly populated settlements are miles apart and situated along the coast, while a few isolated fur trading posts and wandering Indian bands are in the interior.

"Although the weather now is mild and the daylight eighteen hours long, traveling is almost nil due to the swift streams swollen by tons of melting snow. Ice jambs and flows maks it too dangerous for either boat or dog travel, and there are no roads or telephones connecting the villages. If the men were forunate and landed above the melting ice, unless near a habitation, they would not be seen except by stray travelers, and if they landed on an ice pan they could not be rescued.

"If rescued or seen it is not likely that we will know of it until the first boats gets through late in June or July. Their only chance of rescue, therefore, is if they were lost near habitation and on land."

An air expedition now is en route from the United States to Halifax to make a close search in Newfoundland for the missing French aviators, Nungesser and Coli. The plane, which is being taken to Halifax by steamer, is expected to arrive there this morning, whence it will fly to St. Johns, which will be its base. Although the search will be primarily of the interior of Newfoundland, it is possible that search will be made in Labrador.

MONTGOMERY CLEARS AWAY RUINS OF BLAZE

$2,000,000 Damage Present Estimation; Plans Under Way for Rebuilding.

Montgomery, Ala., June 5 (By A. P.). While scores of workmen were clearing away the ruins of the most disastrous fire in the history of the city, Montgomery was making plans today to rebuild the business block which was leveled Saturday, entailing a loss of more than $2,000,000.

Fifty-eight buildings were either destroyed or suffered materially, and it will be several days before a complete check of the losses will be made.

Losses of several thousands of dollars were suffered by business houses within a two-block radius of the burned area from smoke, water and heat. The heat set sprinkler systems in operation and stocks of goods were greatly damaged. Flying sparks caused considerable damage to buildings several blocks away. Firemen were on duty throughout the day playing streams of water on the smouldering ruins and taking every precaution to prevent a flareup.

National guardsmen were on duty and the streets around the burned area were roped off to prevent pedestrians from approaching the walls of the buildings.

QUIZ IN ENSIGN'S DEATH TO BE CONTINUED AT SEA

Women Tell of Search for J. J. McShane After Supposed Fist Fight.

NAVAL BOARD IS SAILING

San Pedro, Calif., June 5 (By A. P.). The inquiry by a naval board into the death of Ensign J. McShane, whose body was found by divers in the harbor here last October, will be resumed Monday on the high seas.

The U. S. S. Tennessee, aboard which the board is sitting, will sail at midnight Sunday for San Francisco. Naval regulations do not permit sessions of the inquiry aboard on Sunday.

Miss Lorena Lynd and Miss Hope Murphy, both of Long Beach, and one of whom was said to have been well acquainted with McShane, testified at yesterday's hearing. Both these young women previously told interviewers that two officers came to their apartment looking for the ensign shortly after his disappearance and before his body was found. These officers told them that McShane had left an officers' party at a yacht club in company with another officer who returned to the Tennessee about 6:30 on the morning the ensign last was seen. McShane's face, the women said the officers told them, bore evidence of a fight.

J. B. Avery, who embalmed McShane' sbody, testified prior to the calling of the women. Attorneys for Mrs. Maria McShane, of Ellicott City, Md., at whose instance the second investigation of her son's death was begun, also took the stand. Mrs. McShane was dissatisfied wih the court's original finding that the ensign was drowned accidentally.

Daughters of the Wearers of the Gray Strew Flowers on Veterans' Graves.

ORATION DELIVERED BY COL. M. THOMPSON

Services Are Held at Monument Southern Trooper Is Eulogized.

Braving yesterday's downpour of rain, a little handful of men in gray gathered yesterday at the Confederate Monument in Arlington Cemetery, to honor comrades of the Civil War buried in the Confederate section of the cemetery.

Flowers were placed on the graves of the Confederate dead by daughters of veterans, and the base of the Confederate Monument piled with flowers by the depleted gray troops who yet survive. More than 500 gathered at Arlington for the exercises.

Describing the Southern forces as the largest volunteer army and the most democratic the world has ever known, Col. Magnus S. Thompson, of Camp 171, United Confederate Veterans, declared men of the South have carved through "the fiery path of war a name that time will ever cherish and honor."

Trooper's Patriotism Lauded.

Lauding the Southern trooper, he said his "character was beyond reproach, his patriotism beyond question, his courage unsurpassed and his loyalty supreme to the end." The South, he said, has own in history "the seed of grandeur that the drowth of envy or the deluge of jealousy can never stifle or becloud."

Led by the United States Army Band the little group marched from the Confederate gate of the cemetery to a plot overlooking the Confederate monument, where the services were opened by Capt. J. T. Petty, commander of Camp 171. Invocation was delivered by the Rev. Parke P. Flournoy.

Organizations participating included Camp 305, Southern Confederate Veterans; chapters of the United Daughters of the Confederacy, Southern Memorial associations, Southern Relief Society and Children of the Confederacy.

Assisting Capt. Petty the committee in charge included: John M. Follin, Capt. D. C. Grayson, Dr. G. Wythe Cook, Mrs. Gabriel Edmonston, Mrs. P. T. Carter, Miss Virginia Grayson, Mrs. Rosa A. Wood, Mrs. Maude Howell Smith, Mrs. Albion W. Tuck, Gen. W. L. Wilkerson, W. L. Terrell, J. M. Utterback, M. E. Kahn and Harry F. Charles.

Hero of Bridge Rescue Has Life Saving Record

Roy A. Pierce, Private at Fort Humphreys, Has Refused Two Carnegie Medals Because He Does Not Like Being Made Much of.

Saving a life is all in a day's work with Private Roy A. Pierce, of the Thirteenth Engineers, at Fort Humphreys. When he plunged into the Potomac off Highway Bridge Saturday to save from drowning a woman he had never seen before, the rescue was the third he had made in as many years.

It was not until last night that mystery surrounding identity of the hero who saved Mrs. Jane Murphy, of New York, from almost certain death, was definitely cleared. Faced with the testimony of his bunky, who witnessed the rescue, Pierce admitted the role he had played.

"I don't like the idea of being a hero," he plead when asked why he disappeared from the scene without leaving his name. It was here developed that the 20-year-old youth has already refused two Carnegie medals for similar feats. "Too much red tape," he said.

When Pierce was 17 years old he saved a girl from drowning when a boat capsized on the Susquehanna River. In this case, as in his Saturday adventure, he quietly slipped away without revealnig his identity. A year later, while camping with a troop of Boy Scouts on the banks of the same river, he rescued a member of his troop when he failed to return to the surface after plunging from a diving board.

According to Private Bert Forsythe, who gave away his "bunky's" secret, the two left Thirteenth Engineer headquarters at Fort Humphreys Saturday afternoon, intent on an afternoon's outing at Glen Echo Amusement Park. Crossing Highway Bridge in a bus, they saw Mrs. Murphy jump over the rail.

"In two minutes Roy had a rope and had jumped over after her," Forsythe said. "Of course he was soaking wet afterward, so we went back to Fort Humphreys, where Roy changed his clothes. An automobile picked us up. We had made up our minds to go to Glen Echo and we did last night after Roy had put on a dry uniform."

Lindbergh's Life Story

ARTICLE IX.

By GEORGE BUCHANNAN FIFE

Any chronicle of "Slim" Lindbergh's flight to Paris should give marked consideration to Raymond Orteig, who, eight years ago, offered a prize of $25,000 to the first aviator who should make a nonstop flight from New York to Paris.

Mr. Orteig, proprietor of the Brevoort Hotel and the Hotel Lafayette in New York, two widely-known hostelries, distinctive resorts for Frenchmen in that city and for friends of France and the French among New Yorkers, was deeply stirred by the unfaltering courage of aviators during the World War. It caught his imagination as few things had ever done.

When, in the course of the great conflict, French military or commercial missions came to the United States, they sought out the Orteig hotels as places of residence during their New York visits. In this way he was brought into close contact with many distinguished aviators, and these most aroused his interest.

There was, to him, something very fine in the bravery of these men, to whom defeat meant death, for whom there was no such thing as surrender and who could not, even if they would, give quarter or take it.

One evening there was a dinner to Eddie Rickenbacker, an American ace, and Mr. Orteig attended it. It was during this dinner that the idea of offering a substantial prize for the first hop to Paris from New York came to his mind.

* * * *

So the prize of $25,000 was established March 22, 1919.

At the donor's request, the Aero Club of America undertook to formulate the conditions and to be judge of the award. As, at the end of the stipulated five years, no one had won the prizes, Mr. Orteig renewed his offer.

About a year ago crack aviators began to think seriously of seeking the rich prize. Capt. Rene Fonck decided to try for it and had constructed a specially designed Sikorski biplane. He came to this country to watch the final work on the plane, which was built on Long Island.

His navigating partner in the flight was Lieut. L. W. Curtin, U. S. N., and on September 21, 1926, the plane was started along the same runway at Roosevelt Field which "Slim" used for his epochal take-off. But the Sikorski ship ran only a short distance over the ground, then tumbled into a 20-foot gulley at the end of the runway and instantly burst into flames.

Capt. Fonck and Lieut. Curtin managed to extricate themselves from the blazing plane, but the mechanic, Jacob Islamoff, and the radio operator, Charles Clavier, who made up the remainder of the crew, were not so fortunate. They were trapped in the cabin of the plane and were consumed with it.

"Slim' Lindbergh knew all about this, knew the difficulty in getting a heavy-laden plane into the air and keeping it there, but, for all that, he turned his mind with great eagerness last autumn to attempting the seeming impossible—that flight from New York to Paris. He was at the time chief pilot in the Air Mail Service between St. Louis and Chicago.

* * * *

He had been at this work from the time the route was inaugurated in April 1926, and again and again demonstrated his air skill. He was known for his uncanny ability at navigation, his sense of speed and direction, and his unqualified confidence in himself, but with no trace of braggadocio. Of one thing "Slim" was acutely conscious: His boyish appearance and manner. His build, too, was extremely youthful, though he was well over 6 feet in stature. He felt that all this would react against him if he sought supporters for a transatlantic hop. He wondered whether his earnestness and his eagerness to make the effort, taken in connection with his experience in the air, would serve to overcome what he frankly listed as his drawbacks.

But he was determined to broach his idea to some one, and that one was his employer, Maj. William B. Robertson, head of the aircraft corporation carrying the St. Louis-Chicago mail, and formerly a skilled Army pilot. Maj. Robertson knew how good an airman "Slim" was, but realized, too, what a demand such a flight would make upon a pilot, and what a stanch, airworthy craft would be required for it.

After they had discussed the matter in detail, they decided to ask the advice of a reporter on the St. Louis Post-Dispatch, who was accounted an authority on aviation. This newspaper man enumerated several interests in St. Louis which might be induced to support such a flight, but he remarked to the youthful flier:

"You'd better let Maj. Robertson go around for you and present the proposal, Slim, because you look entirely too much like a baby. No one in the world who didn't know your ability would ever pick you out to make a transatlantic flight."

* * * *

"Slim" knew this only too well.

"I know that," he replied. "But I can't help what I look like. One thing I do know, though, darn well, and that is that I can fly across."

This quotation is verbatim, especially the "darn," because that is the utter limit of "Slim's" swearing.

However, Maj. Robertson did undertake the rounds in "Slim's" behalf. He interviewed the persons believed to be most likely to give the youngster the financial support that was imperative. But all were frankly skeptical about the success of the undertaking.

"Why, it's nothing short of suicide," some of them said. "This Lindbergh is only a kid."

The decision to ask for financial support for "Slim" was reached on January 9 last, and for a month Maj. Robertson worked at the task like a beaver. But when that month had elapsed he and his brother, Lieut. Frank Robertson, met at the St. Louis flying field, talked over what had been done and came to the reluctant conclusion that there didn't seem to be a ghost of a chance for "Slim" and his hopes.

When they broke this to "Slim" the youth shook his head, a world of disappointment in the gesture, and said:

"Well, I guess it's all off. So I'll just keep on flying the mail and let it go at that. The other fellows who are going to fly to Paris are getting ready now, and even if I did get the money, it would be almost too late to do anything."

There was no mistaking the grievously regretful look on "Slim's" face.

"Anyhow, we'll try one other place." Maj. Robertson said. "I'm going to call up Harry H. Knight and ask him to help out."

"No use in that," was "Slim's" quick comment. "The flying club hasn't any money. Let's just forget it."

* * * *

But that was one thing Maj. Robertson would not do. He disregarded what "Slim" had said so lugubriously, and called Mr. Knight by telephone.

The result startled the major. Mr. Knight was instantly enthusiastic over the plan. He lost no time in summoning others to the Lindbergh colors. One of these was Harold M. Bixby, president of the St. Louis Chamber of Commerce, also a member of the St. Louis Flying Club and owner of a plane. Another was Albert Bon Lambert, the noted balloonist for whom the Lambert-St. Louis Field is named.

It was explained that "Slim" himself had saved $2,000, which was snug in a bank, and that he wanted to put this in the fund. Maj. Robertson added $1,000, and after Mr. Knight and Mr. Bixby had signed a note for $15,000, the State National Bank at once lent the necessary money, and it was placed at "Slim's" disposal.

And that is the story of the financing of "Slim" Lindbergh for his renowned flight. All that remained was the selection of a type of plane for the daring voyage. This was left entirely in "Slim's" capable hands.

$1,410 IN MAN'S CLOTHES FOUND DEAD IN THICKET

Two Boys Stumble Over Body of William W. Inscoe, of Alexandria.

DEATH IS HELD NATURAL

With pockets bulging with roll after roll of banknotes, the shabbily dressed body of William Wesley Inscoe, of Alexandria, 58 years old, was found yesterday afternoon, lying in an almost impenetrable thicket of bushes in the rear of the old Broomilaw brickyard, near Hunting Creek. City Coroner T. Marshall Jones, who viewed the body before its removal, found evidence that the man had become violently ill, and issued a certificate of death from natural causes.

The body was found by H. T. Richards, the same boy who discovered, under the ice in Hunting Creek last January, the body of Daniel G. Clayborne, who had been missing for two weeks. Richards, whose home is at 719 South Patrick street, Alexandria, accompanied by Thomas N. Norsworthy, of Anacostia, was strolling through the abandoned brickyard when they stumbled over the body, just off an isolated path. They called to two other boys, James Bowman, of 722 South Fairfax street, and Raymond Wells, of 511 Duke street, who notified the police.

Police Sergt. Sims and an undertaker, searching the body for marks of identification, found three pocketbooks filled with $20 and $10 notes, totaling $1,410, and a memorandum containing the name of Inscoe, who was a patternmaker, employed by the Temple Foundry. It was later learned that he had left his home, 800 Franklin street, about 11 o'clock yesterday, and walked in the direction of Hunting Creek.

When he left the house where he boarded he appeared to be in his usual good health. Coroner of Alexandria Jones was of the opinion he had been seized with an attack of what appeared to be cholera morbus, and probably suffered a heart attack which proved fatal. A watch in the dead man's pocket was still running when the body was found.

Inscoe is survived by two sons, one of whom, Ernest Inscoe, is a member of the District of Columbia Fire Department, and two daughters. He was a native of King Georges County, and had lived in Alexandria since early manhood.

The body was taken to Demaine & Sons undertaking establishment, where the funeral will probably be held tomorrow afternoon. Funeral arrangements, however, have not been completed.

MARINE UNINJURED AFTER 40-FOOT FALL

Companion Held by Police; Room of Their Hotel Is Found Wrecked.

After toppling from a third floor rear window of the National Hotel, Sixth street and Pennsylvania avenue northwest, and crashing through the roof of an abandoned boiler building yesterday morning, Private Alvin P. Beer, 24 years old, a marine from Quantico, Va., was found unconscious in the debris of the building. At Emergency Hospital he was found practically uninjured.

The fall, police say, climaxed a party arranged by Beer and Private Frank Straga, also a marine. Straka was taken into custody by Sixth precinct police and held for investigation. The room in which the two spent the night was virtually wrecked, police say. All of the electric light bulbs and fixtures were smashed, furniture was broken and a telephone was torn from the wall, police asserted.

Straka told Detective Dennis J. Cullinane, of the central bureau, who investigated, that he and Beer registered at the hotel Saturday night under fictitious names. Beer was "seesawing" on the window sill when he lost his balance and fell 40 feet, Straka said.

BUSINESS DISPLAYS NORMAL PROGRESS, DESPITE HANDICAPS

Mississippi Flood and the Weather Still Continue as Adverse Factors.

BROADENING INQUIRY IN STEEL INDUSTRY

Car Loadings Pass 1,000,000 Mark—Motor Trade Eases. Exports Improve.

New York, June 5 (By the Associated Press.)—Although attended by the usual seasonal declines in many branches, and continued irregularities in others, the general run of business last week displayed satisfactory evidences of normal progress. Weather conditions and the Mississippi flood were yet factors with adverse shadings, but most of the accepted indices of commercial trends presented no cause for pessimism.

Steel demand lessened in volume, but there was no noticeable falling off in the number of orders, and a broadening inquiry for third-quarter requirements was beginning to be felt. The situation appeared to emphasize the present practice of buying for consumption, which is regarded as one of the most healthful symptoms of the period.

Freight loadings, again influenced by flood damage in the Mississippi basin, declined from the figure of the preceding week, but crossed the million-car mark for the seventh time this year. Decreases in tonnage were noted in practically all divisions, but particularly in miscellaneous freight.

The motor trade, which expanded steadily throughout May, was nearing the edge of the summer decline, and manufacturers were beginning to lay their plans for third-quarter operations.

The announcement of a new Ford model had the effect of clearing the atmosphere considerably, as there had been some hesitancy based upon uncertainty concerning the Dearborn manufacturer's plans. The output of automobiles in May was reported nearly 20 per cent above that of April, and considerably in excess of production in May, 1926.

Export Trade Is Improving.

Export trade appeared to be improving in all directions. Shipments to Europe recorded a marked gain in April, while exports to Asia, due to difficulties in China and the fall in rubber prices, were slightly on the decline. The break in trade relations between Great Britain and Russia was expected to divert a large volume of orders to America. While Washington never has accorded the Moscow government official recognition, much business has ben done with Russia through Central European and Scandinavian channels, as well as through the Amtorg Corporation, the Soviet trade bureau in New York.

The cotton trade continued to lead the textile division. Cotton prices stiffened somewhat during the week, in consequence of flood conditions. Silk remained easy, with buying limited. The furniture trade was quiet, but hardwood prices gave prospects of advancing, also because of high waters in the South. Curtailment in the softwood lumber region of the Northwest was reflected in hardening price tendencies.

Grain Prices Advance.

Grains advanced to the highest general level of the season because of delayed planting in districts where the weather has been unseasonable. Speculative trading in grain was reported the heaviest in two years or so. A sudden break in corn late in the week was attributed to the introduction in the Illinois Legislature of measures designed to regulate trading in the Chicago Board of Trade.

Credit conditions showed little change from the week before. Call money remained relatively stiff, but time loans seemed virtually to be pegged. More indication that low rates will continue indefinitely was seen in the new government financing at the lowest quotations since the war. Bank clearings increased over both the preceding week and the corresponding week of last year, although there were only five banking days.

New York, June 5 (By A. P.).—Several water works systems in the Pacific Northwest have been acquired by Federal Water Service Corporation, which later will be consolidated into a new company, the Oregon-Washington Water Service Corporation. The properties involved are valued at more than $3,300,000 and supply water for domestic and industrial purposes in Vancouver, Burlington, Sedro, Woolley, Mount Vernon and Hoquia, Wash., and Hillsboro and Salem, Oreg.

Associated Laundries of America, Inc., Syracuse, N. Y., announce negotiations have been completed for acquiring a controlling interest in Associated Laundries of Illinois, Inc., which will own and operate the Chicago Wet Wash Co., the New Way Home Service Corporation and the New Way Laundry System Corporation. The combined properties do an annual business of $1,250,000.

Sales of Peoples Drug Stores for the five months this year were $3,093,205, an increase of $749,239, or nearly 32 per cent over the same period of 1926.

New offerings tomorrow include $6,400,000 Fox Detroit Theater Building Colwood Co. first mortgage 6 per cent sinking fund bonds by a syndicate headed by Halsey, Stuart & Co., at 97½ and interest to yield more than 6.25 per cent, and $3,175,000 City of Houston, Tex., 4½ per cent bonds at prices to yield from 4 to 4.25 per cent.

Equitable Trust Co., of New York, and Harris, Forbes & Co., are offering participation certificates in a $20,000,000 one-year external dollar Treasury note of the Free State of Bavaria, priced to yield 5⅜ per cent, in denominations of $1,000 to $25,000.

There is nothing in the statistical position of the rubber market to warrant an extended downward movement, despite the recent reduction of 10 per cent in tire prices by two large mail order houses, says Henderson, Helm & Co., members of the Rubber Exchange of New York. "Indications are," their statement says, "that the price cut will be followed only by companies who also manufacture second grade tires and it is doubtful if high grade tire manufacturers will follow suit."

The business of Pillsbury Flour Mills Co. will be opened formally to public participation tomorrow with an offering by Goldman, Sachs & Co. of $3,000,000 cumulative convertible 6½ per cent preferred stock at $101.50 a share and accrued dividends, also 125,000 shares of common stock of Pillsbury Flour Mills, Inc., at $28 a share.

Two issues of Houston, Tex., bonds will be offered tomorrow through banking groups headed by Halsey, Stuart & Co., Inc. The first issue is $3,175,000 City of Houston 4½ per cent bonds offered at prices to yield 4 to 4.25 per cent according to maturity. The second issue is $500,000 City of Houston 5 per cent water works revenue bonds, offered at prices to yield 4.50 per cent.

NEW FINANCING HELPS SLACKEN BOND TRADING

Dullness Marks Week's Dealings in Listed Issues; Prices Tend Downward.

REDEMPTIONS FALL OFF

New York, June 5 (By the Associated Press).—The immense volume of new financing which poured into the market in May in the record-breaking aggregate of more than $700,000,000, showed marked signs of slackening up in the first week of June. Nevertheless dealers were well stocked with new issues awaiting public consumption, and the inevitable result was a decidedly dull week in the market for listed bonds.

This was in the face of the Treasury's announcement of new June 15 financing at the lowest rate of interest since the war, 3⅜ per cent. The market apparently ignored the subsequent oversubscription of $200,000,000 of the new Government issues, made available to the public at a slight premium, while every desired indication of a continuation of the easy-money period was present in the transaction, the drain on the investment money reservoir caused by the influx of May's many new offerings could not be denied.

A situation has been created much like that of last February, when the enormous volume of new issues temporarily clogged the market for high-grade investment mortgages, and caused considerable recession in prices which had attained the highest general average in many years. The advent of the Government's March financing started another swing upward, and new records were established, after which bond prices again eased off. It had been expected in many quarters that the announcement of the June financial plans would create a similar situation, but this belief was not borne out.

Government issues were relatively active during the week, but prices tended slightly downward. Treasury bonds were liquidated in large numbers, probably, in part at least, to make way for investment in the new 3⅜s, prompt over-subscription of which has left no doubt of their attractiveness. Second Liberty 4¼s, which were called for redemption this fall, and which are now made interchangeable for the new Treasury issue, were accumulated briskly early in the week, but displayed softening tendencies later on.

Redemptions of outstanding bonds in May failed to reach any commanding proportions, and fell far shart of balancing new issues. Retirements during the month amounted to nearly $140,000,000 less than the average of new bonds for a single week. Even a smaller amount is due for redemption in June, when something like $100,000,000 matures.

While prices for high grade issues on the listed market tended downward last week, considerable strength was shown by mortgages with convertible features and those carrying stock warrants. Erie D 4s, on which the conversion privilege expires in October, were in particularly heavy demand, changing hands to the extent of more than $2,000,000, while several others advanced rapidly to new high record prices.

New issues in prospect are not numerous, a fact which is considered with satisfaction by dealers who are waiting the digestion of the present surplus. The proposed $70,000,000 loan to Poland was reported still far from consummation.

Last week's new offerings totaled around $80,000,000, which compares with $120,000,000 for the preceding week, and roughly $35,000,000 in the corresponding week of 1926.

Man Admits Placing Dynamite in Wood

Special to The Washington Post.

Madison, Wis., June 5.—Fred Siebert, 33, confessed in Dane County jail today, that he tried to blow up his wife by placing a charge of dynamite in a stick of firewood, at the farm home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John White, near Rockdale.

The stick of dynamite had been placed in a hollowed piece of firewood, which had been plugged to look like the rest of the wood on the pile. Mrs. Siebert has been living with her parents, pending the outcome of action for divorce against her husband.

Friday afternoon Mrs. Siebert split some wood for the kitchen stove when she noticed that one of the pieces contained some object wrapped in newspapers. She called her father who identified the object as a stick of dynamite

Book by a Peddler Is to Be Published

New York, June 5 (By A. P.).—A book by a ragged down and out peddler in Johannesburg, South Africa, is to be published. Mrs. Ethelreda Lewis was so impressed by the story of his adventures when he came to her door that she persuaded him to write. John Galsworthy calls the result "a gorgeous book," "full of sheer lingo." And Alfred Aloysius Horn has hopes of ending his days other than in poverty that has beset him for the last 20 years of his 60 years of life.

SPECIALTIES' ACTIVITY MARKS CURB DEALINGS

Utilities Shares Are Given Considerable Attention During the Week.

RAIL ISSUES IRREGULAR

New York, June 5 (By the Associated Press).—Comparatively heavy trading and irregular prices characterized the activities in the New York Curb Market last week. On the whole, price-trends appeared to follow rather closely the movements on the "big board."

Although a record number of issues were traded in, a handful of specialties displayed the most activity, with Public Utility shares also receiving close attention. The outstanding leaders were the Celanese of America group, which scored sensational advances to new peak prices. The common stock at one time sold at 302, against a low for the year of 74. The rise was based upon the recent split-up in the company's stock, and reports of excellent business.

Johns Manville also moved rapidly upward in response to the announcement of a new president and the entry of partners of J. P. Morgan & Co. into the board of directors.

Public utilities on the whole, were irregular, with the broadest changes on the up-side. Excellent earnings reports have given many of the stocks in this group a rather firm foundation.

Railroad issues were irregular and navigation company shares inclined to heaviness. Motor stocks displayed weakness, but tire and equipment securities were in good demand. Petroleum shares continued to reflect overproduction and the action of some companies in omitting dividends, while pipe line issues were irregular.

Publishing house stocks were firm and tobaccos showed strength, but theatrical and radio issues sagged. Strength of coal shares contrasted with softness of other mining securities.

More than a score of new issues admitted to trading included common stock of the Chesapeake Corporation, Cities Service Power & Light Company, W. T. Grant Company of Delaware, Boston & Albany Railroad, common and preferrd stocks of New England Public Service Company and Chicago Railway Equipment Company, and bonds of Cuba Northern Railways and the Southern Pacific Company. Twenty-one issues, a new record for one day, were admitted to trading on Thursday.

Coal Output Gains, Despite Mine Strike

(By the Associated Press.)

In spite of the suspension of soft coal mining in part of the unionized fields which began April 1, the total national coal production, as disclosed today by Bureau of Mines reports, is approximating the regular seasonal output. For the week ended May 28, the latest for which the mine records have been compiled, the total soft coal output was 8,474,000 tons, a gain of 200,000 tons over the output of the previous week.

This total was almost the same as that of the corresponding week of 1925, a year when no labor troubles hampered output, though it was slightly under the same week of 1926. Wholesale coal prices as reported in recent weeks have dropped below the levels prevailing when the union suspension began.

Copies of a letter in reference to the Company from Mr. A. C. Loring, President, may be obtained from the undersigned. Mr. Loring has summarized his letter as follows:

RECAPITALIZATION

"It is proposed to recapitalize Pillsbury Flour Mills, Incorporated, (a Delaware corporation) which owns all of the Capital Stock of Pillsbury Flour Mills Company (a Minnesota corporation) and to redeem the outstanding Serial 5½% Collateral Trust Notes of the Delaware corporation. The funded debt of Pillsbury Flour Mills Company (of Minnesota) and its subsidiaries is as follows:

	Authorized	Outstanding in Hands of Public
Island Warehouse Corporation First Mortgage 6% Bonds due 1943	$5,000,000*	$1,643,700
Pillsbury Flour Mills Company First Mortgage 6% Bonds due 1943	10,000,000	5,750,000

*Additional authorized bonds can only be issued if pledged under the mortgage securing the Pillsbury Flour Mills Company First Mortgage 6% Bonds.

The Minnesota company and its subsidiaries have no preferred stocks outstanding or authorized.

THE MINNESOTA COMPANY

Pillsbury Flour Mills Company, directly and through its subsidiaries, operates one of the largest flour milling businesses in the world. It owns directly or through subsidiaries completely equipped flour milling properties at Minneapolis and Anoka, Minn., Atchison, Kas., and Buffalo, N. Y. The Buffalo property has been in full operation since September 1924. The Company has a total of 38,900 daily barrels of flour milling capacity and 7,815,000 bushels of elevator capacity, with 1,000,000 bushels additional in course of construction.

The building of a large milling plant in Buffalo has given the Company a much better opportunity to take advantage of low cargo rates on grain as against increased rail rates on flour, and has made it possible, as a result, materially to improve its position in developing its eastern and export business. During recent years there have been developed by the Company a number of successful package food products which have been well received by the trade and which should become an important and profitable part of the business. The Company's products are known as 'Pillsbury's Family of Foods' and include such well known brands as 'Pillsbury's Best Flour', 'Pillsbury's Pancake Flour', 'Pillsbury's Health Bran' and 'Pillsbury's Farina'.

The Company's products have been widely and successfully advertised for years and the goodwill which has thus been created is of inestimable value. It is, however, carried on the balance sheet at only $1.00.

THE INDUSTRY

Demand for flour is unusually stable and unaffected by the general condition of trade. The manufacturer's success depends largely upon his skill in buying and selling and his ability to take advantage of all possible savings and technical improvements. A large, well financed company owning a group of mills, wisely distributed geographically, therefore, is best equipped to succeed and is affected less by reason of unfavorable local crop conditions.

The miller has available to him a broad market for his flour and grain inventory which can be liquidated very rapidly without serious depreciation in values. He can also protect himself from declines in the value of his inventory and losses on unfilled flour contracts caused by fluctuation in the grain market by his ability to 'hedge' his transactions through the purchase or sale of contracts for the future delivery of grain.

PROFITS

Messrs. Touche, Niven & Co. have audited the books and accounts of Pillsbury Flour Mills, Incorporated, and subsidiaries for the two years ended June 30, 1926 and have made a general survey of the accounts for the ten months' period ended April 30, 1927. Based on such audits and survey, the consolidated net profits of Pillsbury Flour Mills Company (of Minnesota) and its subsidiaries, earned on its outstanding Capital Stock all of which is owned by the Delaware company, as certified by Messrs. Touche, Niven & Co., have been as follows:

Year ended June 30:	Net profits as defined above	Times Preferred Stock dividend requirement earned	Balance after deducting Preferred Stock dividend requirement	Per share of Common Stock
1925	$1,225,319.51	3.14	$ 835,319.51	$2.09
1926	1,544,428.12	3.96	1,154,428.12	2.89
1927*	2,268,183.51	5.81†	1,878,183.51†	4.69†

*Ten months ended April 30.
†Based on a full year's Preferred Stock dividend requirement.

It is anticipated that such net profits for the full year ending June 30, 1927 will be approximately equal to those for the ten months ended April 30, 1927.

An initial quarterly dividend of 40 cents per share of Common Stock will be paid September 1, 1927 which is at the annual rate of $1.60 per share.

ASSETS AND BALANCE SHEET

The consolidated balance sheet of Pillsbury Flour Mills, Incorporated and subsidiaries, as of April 30, 1927, prepared by Messrs. Touche, Niven & Co., from their general survey of the Company's accounts since June 30, 1926 and after giving effect to the proposed recapitalization, shows net tangible assets of $14,479,972.56, or the equivalent of $241.33 per share of Preferred Stock to be presently outstanding."

$101.50 Per Share of Preferred Stock
Plus accrued dividend
$28.00 Per Share of Common Stock

These offerings are made subject to allotment or prior sale and in all respects when, as and if issued and accepted by us and subject to the approval of stockholders and of Messrs. ANOTHER AMERICAN TRIUMPH.

The passengers of the steamship Mauretania enjoyed an unprecedented sensation yesterday when, soon after overtaking and passing the cruiser Memphis, bearing Charles A. Lindbergh to Washington, they were treated to an aerial visit from the airplane Columbia, carrying Chamberlin and Levine. The meeting occurred 340 miles west of Land's End, at about 4:20 o'clock. Chamberlin flew low, encircled the ship, and resumed his eastward flight at great speed, disappearing in three minutes. His plane was working perfectly. Later, the Columbia was sighted over Plymouth.

Chamberlin's successful flight more than doubles the glory that has been achieved by American aviation, because it tends to establish the conviction that transatlantic flight is not a mere lucky stroke when performed by Americans, but is soon to become a practicable and habitual method of travel. This is the confident prediction of Capt. Lindbergh, based upon his own flight, which he said was merely the precursor of regular communication.

The passengers on the Mauretania beheld what may soon become one of the accustomed sights on the ocean—the meeting of ships and airplanes, the exchange of messages and mails, and possibly even the transfer of passengers. In due time the launching of airplanes from the decks of vessels will be accomplished, and doubtless Lindbergh's plan for fixing "way station" vessels in the ocean for the accommodation of airplane expresses will be realized. The Atlantic is shrinking fast.

WALLACE, N. C.

Wallace, N. C., can claim glorious distinction. Last year it became the world's leading strawberry mart, having consigned 380 carloads of the luscious red berries to outside points. These shipments were not made up of berries produced in nearby markets, but only of those produced in Wallace itself. This year Wallace again tops the list, having shipped so far nearly 650 carloads of berries.

What a splendid contribution to the happiness of humanity! No matter whether or not Wallace ever does anything else for which its name might appear in the papers, it has earned its title to fame by virtue of its fecudity in strawberries. Wallace deserves a monument. Its name should be carved in brass embedded in solid granite, not only for the benefit of posterity, but also as a continual reminder that the production of strawberries must not be permitted to drop off.

A GREAT DANISH SCHOLAR.

In the person of Vilhelm Ludwig Peter Thomsen, who has recently died in his eighty-sixth year, there has passed away one of the greatest of modern Danish scholars and one of the finest linguists of Europe. Born in Copenhagen in 1842, he made his studies in a university there. Devoting himself to research work in connection with such languages as Hungarian, Gothic and Lithuanian, he became, in 1876, editor of the "Nordisk Tidskript for Filologi" and continued in that role until 1892. In the meantime he was appointed, in 1887, professor of comparative philology, at the University of Copenhagen, and in the same year he published, in English, his monumental work, entitled "The Relations Between Ancient Russia and Scandinavia and the Origin of the Russian State."

The discovery of old Turkish Runic inscriptions in Mongolia in 1889 gave Thomsen an opportunity of still further distinguishing himself. These inscriptions, written or rather carved in the eighth century, were in an alphabet which had faded from the memory of man and which is now known as Kok-Turkish. When Thomsen eventually succeeded in deciphering them in 1893, it was a great feather in his cap and gave him a world-wide reputation among those learned in such matters. The linguistic interest attaching to these passages of an earlier time was naturally very great, but it was almost eclipsed by the historical importance of the contents, which give a vivid first-hand account of the early Turks written by themselves. Among those monuments were two monoliths, dated respectively A. D. 732 and 735, inscribed on one side in Turkish and on the other in Chinese, and telling that, on the occasion of the death of two Turkish princes, the ruling T'ang Emperor of China sent condolences by special envoys and ordered epitaphs to be engraved in honor of the deceased.

Thomsen's interpretation of these relics of a remote antiquity has since served as the foundation of important historical investigations by Sinologists, as well as by Islamic scholars. His rendering of the obscure inscriptions naturally gave the Danish scholar a high place in the esteem of the modern Turks, who, through his ability alone acquired the knowledge they now possess of their original nomadic ancestors. Among others his name will live as that of a profound scholar and an able, gifted, and acute original investigator.

ITALY AND JUGOSLAVIA.

The rupture of diplomatic relations between Jugoslavia and Albania would mean little if the two countries alone were concerned, but in view of the strained relations between Italy and Jugoslavia the incident may be the forerunner of highly important events. The ostensible cause of the break was the refusal of the Albanian government to give satisfaction to Jugoslavia in the matter of the detention of a legation attache.

In spite of the assurances given by Italy in regard to the pacific nature of its treaty with Albania, it is commonly assumed that in making this treaty Ahmed Zogu, the Albanian head of state, placed his country under the hegemony of Italy. The way is open, at least, for the occupation of Albanian ports by Italy in case of war against the two countries by other nations. The making of this treaty led to the resignation of the Jugoslavian cabinet after its head declared with bitterness that all his efforts to cultivate intimate relations with Italy had come to naught.

After the agreement with Albania had been made a treaty was concluded between Italy and Hungary, which still further aroused the apprehensions of Jugoslavia. Italy also ratified the Treaty of Paris under which the great powers recognized the right of Roumania to annex Bessarabia. Improved relations were also effected between Italy and Bulgaria as a result of Premier Mussolini's diplomacy. Thus, by several sweeping agreements, Italy apparently isolated Jugoslavia on the north and east, as well as on the south and west. The "little entente," embracing Czechoslavia, Roumania and Jugoslavia, remains in existence, but it is aimed principally against possible developments in Hungary and Austria, and Jugoslavia is understood to have advised Roumania that the entente will not be considered binding in case of war over Bessarabia.

A serious quarrel between Italy and Jugoslavia might result in the occupation of Albania by Italy and the closing of the Adriatic. This step has been feared by Jugoslavia ever since the quarrel over Fiume. On several occasions a crisis has been averted through the good offices of Great Britain and France.

Friction between Jugoslavia and Albania a few months ago greatly excited Italy, which gave full credence to reports that Jugoslav forces had crossed the border into Albania. Threats of immediate war were uttered at Rome. No one doubts that an attack by Jugoslavia upon Albania would result in war between the former and Italy; and if Jugoslavia has reached the conclusion that an offensive operation against Albania is the best defensive measure that could be taken against Italy's recent diplomatic maneuvers, it may be that hostilities will not be long delayed.

CHICAGO'S SANITARY PROBLEM.

Within the month it is expected that Charles E. Hughes will have submitted his findings to the United States Supreme Court in the matter of the diversion of the waters of the Great Lakes through the Chicago Drainage Canal.

The case comes up through the appeal of Wisconsin, Michigan, Ohio and New York for an injunction to restrain the Chicago Sanitary District from increasing the diversion of the waters of the lakes into the Mississippi. The present diversion, which is authorized in the agreement between the State and the Federal authorities, reaches 10,000 second-feet. This, Chicago claims, is insufficient to carry its sewage into the channel of the Mississippi. On the other hand, the States asking for the injunction assert that through changing the natural outlet of the waters of Lake Michigan the sanitary commission has caused a fall in the level of the lakes to the detriment of navigation, and that to permit more water to be diverted will cause great damage to commerce and loss to the shipping industry.

During the last week the States seeking the injunction have been represented before the special representative of the court by the former Secretary of War, Newton D. Baker, while former Senator James Hamilton Lewis appeared for Chicago. Another eminent attorney in behalf of the sanitary commission is James M. Beck, former solicitor general. Mr. Beck contended that the opponents of the diversion erred in that they failed to include the United States as a party in its prayer for the injunction, and that inasmuch as it is purely a matter of the control of the navigable waters, Congress and not the courts has sole jurisdiction.

While Canada was not included as a party in the present suit, the Dominion has filed protests against granting permission for taking more of the waters of the lakes, as Canada is equally interested in navigation. Should the court decide in favor of Chicago an important international question may arise.

"A PROTESTANT AND A DRY."

The Vic Donahey presidential boom is the subject of persistent rumors. The potential candidate, according to custom, has announced that his hat is not in the ring, and that he will do nothing whatsoever to secure the nomination. Nevertheless, Tom Heflin told the world not long ago that Donahey was good enough for him, and now Senator Thomas, of Oklahoma, has added his praise and approval in the form of a printed leaflet widely distributed.

Senator Thomas has just returned from a trip to Ohio, as a result of which he is able to muster some 20 reasons why Vic Donahey is presidential timber. For instance, to quote from the leaflet, "he resides in a town of about 10,000 population." In addition, besides being a Protestant and a teetotaler, and a personal, political and official success, "Gov. Donahey is supported by all religious groups, is supported by the drys and yet is not opposed by the wets, and is a Democratic platform within himself."

The "best minds" of the Republican party have decided that Al Smith would be the hardest man for Coolidge to beat. Donahey has been thrice elected governor of Ohio, says Senator Thomas. Smith, however, has been elected governor of New York four times, and Ohio, surely, is no more of a key State than New York. Donahey, according to Thomas, believes in low taxes, economy in public expenditures, good roads, and holds that modern-day governments are overorganized and that there are too many boards, commissions and bureaus. Smith would accept similar principles in his platform. Donahey is a Protestant and a dry, says Senator Thomas' leaflet. Smith is neither; and therein lies the essential point over which the battle against Smith's nomination will be fought.

Under ordinary circumstances Donahey would not be considered seriously as a presidential possibility. With McAdoo out, however, and with Smith so completely acceptable in all save at most two particulars, the Democratic party seems to be headed toward a repetition of the sad scenes of the 1924 convention. What it needs is a Moses to lead it through the wilderness—not necessarily George Moses, but at least a lawgiver.

AIR FLIVVERS.

Engelbert Zaschka, a German engineer, claims to have designed, constructed and operated a thoroughly successful and practicable helicopter. If upon examination his claim is substantiated he has solved a problem which has baffled science for years.

One of the disadvantages of the airplane is that it must be kept in motion in order to sustain itself. In addition, a considerable run along the ground must be taken before it attains sufficient speed for the take-off and an equally long landing area must be provided for deceleration at the conclusion of a flight. Zaschka says that his machine will rise without any preliminary run, can be landed upon the roof of a house, and can be held motionless in the air for the transfer of passengers, mail or freight to another similar machine.

In appearance his machine does not differ much from the ordinary monoplane, except that the wings revolve around the body. Simultaneously, motors keep in motion a gyroscope which increases the stability and serves as an energy accumulator for a gliding flight to make a landing. Gliding in this case means a straight descent. In addition, however, it is claimed that the apparatus can be operated more cheaply than the modern airplane, an 8-horsepower engine being sufficient to lift the machine from the ground.

Time and experience alone will tell whether or not the Zaschka helicopter is of commercial importance. Sooner or later, however, a plane will be invented which will be able to take off and land in a small area. Then the day of the air flivver will be at hand, for when an individual can take off from his back yard and land as gently as he pleases there will be no excuse for wasting time in an automobile.

IMPROVEMENTS IN NEW YORK.

With a construction program involving the expenditure of upwards of $115,000,000 this year, Gov. Smith of New York has reached the conclusion that there should be some central authority over such a vast enterprise. The governor has appointed a board of five members of his "cabinet" to meet the emergency.

One of the most important problems to be considered, and the one in which every motorist who traverses the highways of the State is most directly concerned, is the elimination of grade crossings over the railroads. Work on the replacement of bridges and the elimination of these dangerous crossings has already begun and during the present season it is expected that more than 500 such crossings will be made safe by the elevation of tracks or the elevation of the roadways across them. This work is made possible through a bond issue of some $300,000,000 authorized last year.

Construction now under contract, which includes hospitals, office buildings and schools, calls for an expenditure of $47,000,000, and by the end of June $13,000,000 more building work will have been placed on the market. The Empire State is rapidly reaching the front rank in the number of miles of improved highways. The further extension of the mileage of hard surfaced roads during the present season will involve the expenditure of upward of $100,000,000.

BULLY FOR BRITAIN!

Great Britain passed a milestone this week when it was announced in the House of Commons that the number of unemployed had fallen below 1,000,000 for the first time since 1921. Although the figure is still too large in proportion to the population, it must be remembered that for years on end the number of those without work was nearer 1,500,000, and that the strain of the dole, granted the jobless, was one of the heaviest burdens the British carried.

No one will ever be able to estimate exactly what the processes of post-war readjustment cost the British nation. The subjects of the king paid in the form of taxes, industrial depression and economic instability until the country was virtually bled white. They paid, that is the important thing, and today sterling is just about at par, unemployment is decreasing, industry is getting back on its feet and the country can look to the future with pleasant anticipation. The bulldog determination of the people who do not know when to quit is still paying dividends.

New York's appropriation of $50,000 for a Lindbergh welcome fund probably will convince the average New Yorker that the Capital has been put in its rightful place.

Imagine the feeling of a furniture dealer after reading that A. H. Woods, who specializes in bedroom suites only, has acquired a fortune of $500,000.

It is about time for some government employe to complain because the Saturday half holiday does away with his lunch period.

Jewel robberies are so common in New York that theater ticket grafters are beginning to scratch their heads for new ideas.

Judging from the accounts of the work involved, those who go with the President really do not share in his vacation.

Future Presidents may have difficulty in reviewing the fleet from the Mayflower. It will be too high up in the air.

A flood of speeches is not a sure means of flood prevention.

Easy Pickings.

PRESS COMMENT.

Wrong Tense.

Pittsburgh Gazette-Times: Clemenceau says that Lindbergh "ought to go far." He has gone some distance already.

Well Qualified.

Milwaukee Journal: Eskimos ought to make great bond salesmen. They use 12,000 words for ordinary conversation.

Much Smoke.

Louisville Times: The more we see of flaming youth the more we become convinced it does not call for a general alarm.

Rare Sight.

Detroit News: Doubtless if Lady Godiva rode down through Coventry again today the whole town would turn out to see a horse.

Good Doctrine.

Atchison Globe: Perhaps it is just as much of a sin to hurt a person's feelings as to hurt his physical being by stabbing or shooting him.

Horrible Possibility.

Ohio State Journal: The great danger now is that Roy Haynes will think he has to run for something and be vindicated at Ohio's expense.

Scarce Diet.

Fort Wayne News-Sentinel: The horsefly is probably tempted to make a hog of himself whenever he has the good luck to find a horse these days.

Plenty of Material.

Detroit News: It takes all kinds of people to make a world; so even if Sinclair Lewis lives to be 1,000 he probably won't run out of subjects.

Why Save Daylight?

New York Evening Post: Scientists insist the sun is going to last us another 15,000,000,000 years. What, then, is the idea of all this daylight saving?

Welcome Used Up.

Boston Globe: Other American aviators who have been planning to fly across to Paris had better make their objective point some other European capital.

The World Wants Serpents.

Cincinnati Enquirer: The Florida publicity agent who claimed that he saw a sea serpent off shore was purveying the best kind of publicity in these arid days.

Too Much Pedestrianism.

Boston Transcript: If America's most terribly expiated crime of the nineteenth century were human slavery, that of the twentieth is undoubtedly human pedestrianism.

All That Is Necessary.

Kansas City Star: Nowadays a fellow can launch into the book publishing business pretty safely if he can exact a promise from the censors to suppress his first four or five books.

Gift to Posterity.

Philadelphia Evening Public Ledger: During the last 25 years, Government records show, 8,000,000 trees have been planted in Canada. This isn't so many as have been cut down, but, nevertheless, it is a rather important little gift to posterity.

Disappointed New York.

Philadelphia Public Ledger: New York is keenly disappointed because Capt. Lindbergh is scheduled to receive his "welcome home" in Washington. That feeling is natural. New York has welcomed so many notables, and welcomed them so well, that it feels it has a vested right to such demonstrations. So there has been some talk about the Washington welcome violating "every tradition." There are mutterings that the flier is entitled to "the kind of a welcome that only New York is able to give him." There is a feeling that Washington will take the edge off the great ovation New York is preparing. A few of the more resentful New Yorkers came dangerously near drawing upon their own too-devoted heads a national reminder that Washington, after all, is the Nation's Capital and the fitting place to confer honors given by the Nation. The New York welcome will not be delayed long, anyway, and the city that has greeted so many of the great and famous should gracefully waive whatever claim it has upon Capt. Lindbergh in favor of the Capital.

Camel Competition.

Philadelphia Record: Turkey is contemplating the construction of a new national railway, and the first 240-mile stretch of trackage was opened the other day for general use, with impressive ceremonies. Premier Ismet took a leading role in the goings-on, which included the sacrific of 100 sheep and one lone camel. Of course, if they must have some living sacrifice, the sheep seems to be the logical animal, especially in that part of the world. But why pick on a camel to forfeit his whimsical existence merely by way of celebration? The camel tribe will suffer enough after the railroad gets under way, for they will be out of a job as freight carriers; but it is a little soon to start killing them off in such heartless fashion. Surely it would be kinder to let them find out gradually that they were running a poor second best to the railroad, and then the depressing knowledge would lead the animals one by one to lay their inviting necks on the rail so that the Angora express might make a thorough job of annihilation.

Criminals Start Young.

Louisville Courier Journal: At least one civic body, the Ohio Institute, has taken the trouble to determine by comparative statistics how far modern youth is slipping into criminal ways. It found that in Ohio, from 1860 to 1900, 26 per cent of convicted murderers were under 25 years of age. From 1906 to 1910 the percentage increased to 27, but fell to 21 per cent during the five-year period from 1921 to 1926. So much for crime to which adults are principally addicted. The ages at which criminals were convicted, the institute discovered, have varied only slightly and show no trend, but in all times most criminals have begun their careers in adventurous youth.

JACK RABBIT'S SPEED.

A Western physician returning from a professional call across the country stirred up a jack rabbit, says the Evansville Journal. The animal trotted along in front of the physician's car undisturbed apparently while it was traveling 25 miles an hour. Here was a sporting chance to try out the runner made famous by Mark Twain. The physician speeded his car from 25 to 30 miles, and then to 35. The rabbit held its place in the road apparently enjoying the race at that pace. Then the doctor turned on the gas to a speed of 40 miles an hour. The rabbit held the road until it sensed the car was gaining upon it and then loped off into the brush at the side of the road. Thus it appears that the unknown speed of the famous animal has been established. Many a good hound dog has run itself almost to death in pursuit of a jack rabbit before it would give up the chase. Even the greyhound has never been able to carry on with a jack rabbit. It has taken an automobile to drive the jack from the field in a race for speed. No doubt the jack is wondering what sort of a dog has come into its field to defeat it in a trial of speed.

STICKING TOGETHER.

If one were to examine the history of civilization, observes the Gary Post-Tribune, it would be found that the nations and the tribes and the families that have been most successful have been those that have had the faculty, in common speech, of sticking together. Different groups of people have varied greatly in this respect. In some this tie of loyalty has been very strong. An intense feeling of attachment would bind together the members of such families and countries. If one member of such a community was injured, all felt the injury, and they rallied to defend all their numbers against such attacks. Nations and tribes and families where that strong feeling of attachment has been felt, were always very powerful.

And then in contrast there were groups of people where this strong feeling of mutual attachment did not exist. They have not fared so well. In many cases such countries and groups would split up into hostile factions, which would destroy the influence and power of such a group so as to be almost negligible.

This principle has its application to everyday affairs now, in our own communities, or any city like Gary. If we stick together, we shall get results, and if we do not, we shall fall behind and miss our aims.

Any town or city can grow and advance, if there is a strong feeling of home town loyalty, of attachment to the community and its business and its enterprises. One of the best manifestations of that spirit is seen where people have a strong tendency to do their buying at home. They feel a loyal attachment to their townsmen who are conducting business there and they prefer to stand by and support the home-town enterprises. A town where that spirit prevails is sure to go ahead.

EXPENSIVE GRADUATION.

The commencement season is coming on all over the land, and sweet girl graduates and eager boys have their hearts set on making theirs just as fine a commencement as anybody ever had, says the Elkhart Truth. Excitement over final examinations shares attention with excitement over graduation clothes and the class party—quite widely known as the "prom" and consequently more expensive than the old-style class dance in the school gym.

There are class rings or class pins to be purchased, the school annual which every senior feels he can not live without, photographs to send to loving relatives and to exchange with schoolmates, engraved cards and commencement invitations, and always, of course, the new clothes to wear to graduation exercises. It runs into money, as parents can tell you.

There have been movements in many schools to keep graduation expenses down to a thrifty minimum. Girls make their own dresses in sewing classes, flowers are taboo, except uniform small bouquets paid for from the class treasury, and so on. But thrift really isn't very popular among the boys and girls who are graduating. Teachers say it is almost impossible to get unified action on inexpensive commencements. They get no support from parents, who say indulgently, "Oh, well, you only graduate from high school once in your life!"

Unfortunately city high schools try too much to copy college activities. In a big city with 2,000 students graduating it is estimated that the minimum special expense will total $100,000. Principals and teachers deplore it, but parents accept it as inevitable.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

Mexicans in California.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The enclosed clipping criticising your stand on the Mexican immigration question is from the Los Angeles Times of May 25. I am sure your editorial will be approved by a large majority of all classes of people in California. Some months ago the head of the State Immigration Department stated that unless a curb is put on this rush of immigrants, the County Boards of Charities all over Southern California will not be able to carry the burden. Eighty per cent of the taxes spent on charities of various kinds in Los Angeles County goes to Mexicans.

H. T. COLBY.

Los Angeles, Calif., May 27.

Against Tax Increase.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: After reading Dr. George C. Havenner's remarks before the Citizens Advisory Council advocating increased taxation for the people of the District, the thought occurred to me that he does not speak for the thousands of Government clerks who are trying to buy a home and raise a family on a salary of $1,600 a year or less. An icrease of 25 per cent over the present tax would compel hundreds of them to sell their homes.

He refers to increased prosperity which means increased cost of living without a corresponding increase in the salaries of Government clerks.

I purchased a home in 1919 and paid $41 for taxes. Last year it was $83, and further increase would compel me to dispose of it. JOSEPH M. OWENS.

Paths for Pedestrians.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In arranging Washington's park system there is one thing the Commissioners have forgotten. They have made abundant provision for the comfort and pleasure of the automobilists and those who ride horseback, but absolutely nothing for the pedestrian. Walking is a most healthful exercise. So far as health is concerned, walking is much better than automobiling, or even horseback riding. But who cares for the poor devil who doesn't own an auto or a riding suit? Through Rock Creek Park, it is true that few paths for pedestrians have been marked out, but where are they? They are so located that the walker is compelled to climb a hill. In Potomac Park there is not a pedestrian path provided.

It is no longer safe or pleasant to walk on the streets; the continued watchfulness necessary to dodge autos make street walking anything but delightful. Walking is about denied to an inhabitant of Washington if pleasure and enjoyable exercise is desired. There is but one place where he can find any provision made for his comfort, and that is in the Ellipse. There a walk has been provided. Hundreds of parents would like to take their children to Rock Creek Park, where they can see nature in its most beautiful garb, giving them a healthful walking exercise, but owing to the neglect of those in power the walking exercise is not available. The Park Commissioners want something to do. Let them apply themselves to locating and laying out some pedestrian walks, accessible walks, where those who use them will not be forced to climb a hill. The world was not made for autoists and equestrians only.

Houston Post-Dispatch: Judging by the way influence and forces are closing in upon us we feel that in another week we shall no longer be able to evade sauerkraut juice, and that it is but a question of time until our wild, free spirit will be conquered to the point where we must submit to spinach and carrots.

WIVES OF AVIATORS PREPARING TO MAKE VOYAGE TOMORROW

Women Prepared to Sail on Berengaria; Both Still Are Nervous.

CHAMBERLIN COURTED BY PLANE, IT IS SAID

Mrs. Levine Has "Terrible Night" of Worry, She Says; Thankful for Good News.

New York, June 5 (By A. P.)—Mrs. Clarence Chamberlin and Mrs. Charles Levine will probably both be passengers on the Berengaria Tuesday, Europe bound to meet the husbands who crossed the ocean in a quicker though more perilous manner.

Mrs. Chamberlin announced tonight that she would take passage on the Berengaria and Mrs. Levine said she would go to join her husband just as soon as possible. It was believed the two would travel together.

Both women expressed great joy on learning that the ocean had been safely passed and that their husbands were approaching Berlin.

Proud of Levine, She Says.

"If I had known the idea of going on that flight was in my husband's mind I never would have let him start, but I am proud of him," Mrs. Levine said. She did not know Levine was to fly with Chamberlin until she saw him climb into the cockpit and sail away.

Mrs. Levine sent a cablegram to her husband tonight in care of Jacob Gould Schurman, American Ambassador in Berlin.

"Following your flight with prayer, love, pride and confidence," the message said. "Family send love. Cable promptly. Will leave to meet you. (Signed) Grace.

Sleeps After Takeoff.

Unlike Mrs. Levine, and sure in her knowledge of her husband's ability, Mrs. Chamberlin slept most of Saturday night following a day of nervous tension prior to his start for Europe.

Of this, she said:

"I was really pretty well fagged out and although I was worried, of course, I still had great faith in Clarence's ability to carry on. So far as he was concerned I was practically assured and my only worry was the plane. But I was rather sure of that, too.

"You can imagine that I had been keyed up and when I got to bed I said to myself that it was useless to worry and finally I dropped off and slept most of the night, although fitfully. I awoke with a start at 5 a. m., but later dropped off again. Of course, I am anxious, but I can't say I am worried because I have such faith in Clarence."

Only Toys With Her Food.

Nevertheless Mrs. Chamberlin must have had a worry down deep in spite of her brave attempt to appear at ease. She had luncheon at the Pennsylvania Hotel and ate very little, toying with her food and with her mind's eye evidently following the course of the Bellanca plane across the Atlantic wastes.

She was vastly relieved when she was informed of the sighting of the Columbia by the Mauretania 30 miles off the French coast. So relieved, indeed, that she dressed and went over to Brooklyn to make a call at the home of Senator Charles Lockwood, a friend of the family.

Mrs. Chamberlin is a slight little thing of a pronounced blonde complexion with reddish blonde hair having just a trace of gold.

She wore a green georgette frock with a pleated skirt, light weight sandals of a late French importation and a corsage of pink sweet peas and bachelor buttons.

An Accomplished Musician.

She is intensely interested in flying and proud of her husband's achievements and she says she wouldn't have him in any other business because he is doing the things which make him happiest.

Mrs. Chamberlin is an accomplished musician and a great part of her musical education was made possible by Chamberlin's work. In order that she might have the best teachers her husband has made long and hazardous flights in all sorts of weather and a large part of the money so earned went to Mrs. Chamberlin's teachers.

She is an Iowa girl, coming from a town named Independence, in the eastern end of the State, while Chamberlin comes from Denison, in the West. Much of their courtship was carried on by plane, Chamberlin often flying across the State to visit her before their marriage eight years ago.

Speaking today of his ability, she said:

"One reason why I have faith is that I have seen him do so many difficult things.

Berlin Flight "Like Play"

"Once last winter he flew down to Virginia and landed in a thick fog. There was no regular landing field and he had to pick out an open place large enough to land on. The section was crowded full of houses and barns, and what with the thick fog, it was a difficult business, but he made it.

"After that a flight to Berlin is like play.'

The information that her husband had been sighted off the French coast came as a great relief to Mrs. Levine at her home at Belle Harbor, L. I., where she had spent a sleepless night.

"I can never be thankful enough for the good tidings," she said, "for I have certainly put in a terrible night."

History and Work of Church Given by Richard A. Ford and John M. King.

Exercises were held yesterday morning in observance of the seventieth anniversary of the Fifth Baptist Church and the eighteenth anniversary of its pastor, the Rev. Dr. John E. Briggs. The services were held at the church, Six-and-a-half and E streets southwest.

Dr. Briggs preached on the "Strength of Old Age." He also read an original poem, "Our Song of Seventy," outlining the work of the church since its organization.

The church was organized in what was then known as "Island Hall," with 24 members. Dr. C. C. Meador, of Bedford County, Va., became the first pastor, while he was a student at Columbian College, and continued in office until his death, 47 years later.

The history of the church was read yesterday by Richard A. Ford and John M. King outlined the work of the church during the past eighteen years.

A Jehoida chest, with a hole in the lid, was placed in front of the pulpit yesterday and members of the congregation dropped conrtibutions in it for the reduction of the building debt, incurred two years ago, when the Darlington memorial was added. The Darlington memorial was erected in memory of J. J. Darlington, who was the senior deacon when he died six years ago. The present church building was erected 25 years ago.

Funeral services will be held at 10:30 o'clock tomorrow morning at St. Andrew's Episcopal Church, Fifteenth and V streets northwest. The Rev. J. J. Dimon, rector of the church, will conduct the services. Burial will be in Congressional Cemetery.

Chief Justice Taft and the associate justices of the Supreme Court will be honorary ballbearers. The active pallbearers will be Deputy Clerk C. Elmore Cropley, Assistant Clerks Reginald C. Began as Assistant Clerk.

Mr. Stansbury has been in the clerk's office at the Supreme Court for more than 45 years. He began as the lowest assistant clerk and worked his way to the chief clerkship. He was probably the greatest living authority on appellate practice in the world and was known to nearly every lawyer practicing before the Supreme Court, all of whom depended upon him for information in appellate matters.

Born in Washington [illegible] years ago he has been a resident of this city all of his life with the exception of several years service in the Signal Corps of the United States Army. He attended Young's Private School. He never married.

Besides Mr. Tyler, he is survived by a brother, Phil R. Stansbury, of Rockville, and a niece, Mrs. William H. Haydon, of Maryland.

"Piedmont"

Jefferson County, 70 Miles From Washington

"Piedmont" was built about 1780, and is an unusually fine example of Georgian architecture, most of the brick having been brought from England. It contains ten large rooms with high ceilings, besides attic and cellar, and two large, well proportioned halls, with a stairway said to be one of the most beautiful in the Valley of Virginia. Each room has a large, old-fashioned fireplace, one containing the original iron fireback English Lion and Coronet. The walls of the living room are covered with one of the few examples of genuine French Tapestry still in existence in this country.

The house was built by Dr. John Briscoe, grandson of Dr. John Briscoe, of "Crofton Hall," England, who came to this country with his friend, Lord Baltimore, in about 1642, and situated only a short distance from the picturesque ruins of St. George's Chapel, the first church built west of the Blue Ridge Mountains.

The lawn is terraced to a winding stream, with colonial "spring-house" and many beautiful old shade trees.

The farm contains about 112 acres, about 70 in cultivation, the rest in permanent pasture, watered by a never-failing stream, and is very fertile land. Farm buildings and fences are all in good repair.

Price, $30,000

We also have anything from a building lot to a gentleman's estate in nearby sections of Virginia and Maryland, for sale or trade at bargain prices.

CONCERNING THE ACTION AND THE CHARACTERS.

Christine Farr, pretty, popular, just 18, is invited to the commencement exercises of Reserve University by the inseparable friends of her childhood, both of whom are in love with her. They are:

Harvey Blanton, handsome, brilliant, aggressive, and his chum and room mate.

Lewis Hayes, grave, dependable, doggedly determined to make his mark in the field of chemical experimentation.

Harvey proposes to her, and is accepted, so Lewis goes away without telling her he loves her on the eve of the wedding of Christine and Harvey. A year later their son is born.

Lewis has returned to town, meanwhile, and is working for the firm which employs Harvey. He tells Harvey he has discovered a chemical formula of great industrial value. Harvey undertakes to get his uncle, the president of the company, to put it across.

Soon after the birth of the second child, Harvey announces that he has been taken into the firm following his discovery of a formula for making rubber. Lewis, meanwhile, has lost his job, his project being a failure, and he goes away.

With money from Harvey's product, the Blantons build a beautiful home. Christine has every luxury, but she is happy only with her children. She finds that Harvey's friends are strangers to her.

A chance meeting with Lewis reveals to her that the old friendship between him and Harvey has been broken.

A friend, who is disturbed by Christine's complete absorption in her children, persuades her to broaden her interests. Christine's first venture is to publish a little book of fairy tales.

Then she learns that Harvey is going a fast pace. In his pocket she finds a love letter.

She goes to her parents, but they refuse to receive her.

So she takes her children and goes to New York to try to earn a living. She makes her home with a middle-aged cousin, Anna Morrison.

After weeks of effort, she gets a job as a dancer in a cheap cabaret. Her funds are exhausted, and she has no choice.

Her first venture is a proposal of marriage from the proprietor. Then she meets Lewis quite by accident.

Their friendship is resumed, since he does not hold enmity against either her or Harvey for the theft of his idea.

Christine writes a magazine series, called "Cabaret Sketches" and succeeds in selling them. But bad luck follows. Cousin Anna is called away from New York, and Christine has to find a new home. Lewis proves his friendship by helping her in every way she will permit.

Harvey is killed in an automomible accident and leaves nothing but debts.

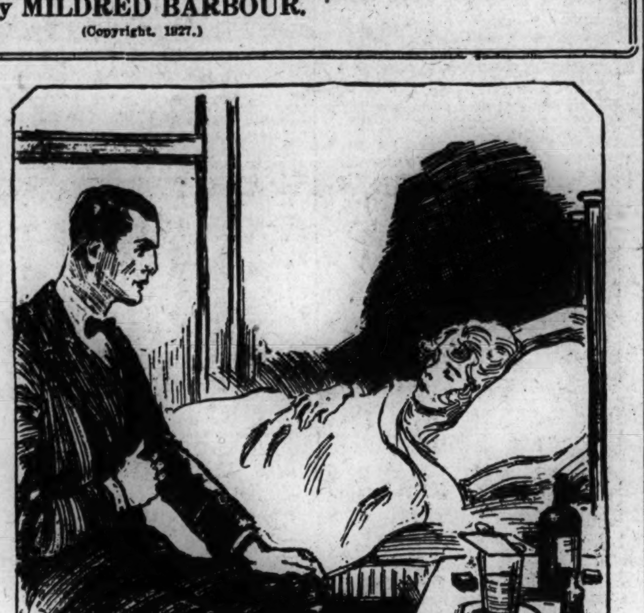
Christine falls ill and is in a hospital for weeks.

CHAPTER XXX.

Despair.

Christine struggled slowly back to consciousness, after weeks filled with racking torture. Her brief periods of sanity had been stabbed only by the thought of her children, but, before her fevered brain could actually formulate the fear she held, she would sink back again into the black abyss over which the Angel of Death hovered.

The first time that she opened her eyes, really conscious of her surroundings in the bare little hospital room, she saw Lewis Hayes beside her bed. His eyes were closed, and she could see the lines of weariness in his thin face. She wondered if he had kept a long vigil over her, but she was too weak to speak or to make a movement of her hand.



With a feeling of relief and comfort at finding him there . . . she fell into a restful sleep.

With a feeling of relief and comfort in finding him there—her always faithful friend—she sank into a restful sleep. The crisis had passed; the doctors said she would get well.

She did not know that Lewis, when he left the hospital went to her little apartment, as he did at that hour day after day, to see that her children were cared for by the woman he had engaged. His whole life, aside from his work, was given up to looking after Christine's interests. He rose earlier than ever in the mornings, that he might have time to see the children on the way to his work. He managed to come again at noon. As soon as his day's work was done, he would go to the hospital, to sit for a while in Christine's room, even though she was not conscious of his presence. Then he would go back to the children. It meant dining very late, but he did not care. Nothing mattered but that Christine should get well.

He never told her what he had done, but on the day that she left the hospital, weak and pale, a shadow of her former self, the woman in charge of the children unburdened herself of a secret that Lewis would rather have had kept—the story of his unselfish devotion.

"It's a foine young man you've got, Mrs. Blanton," she said. "Oi hope the wedding' will be soon; he needs lookin' after a bit himself, the poor lad!"

Christine smiled faintly, but she did not explain. Nothing seemed to matter. She lifted her hand and looked at it curiously. It was so thin that her wedding ring, which she had continued to wear, would no longer stay on her finger.

After a day or two, when she had gained a little strength, she forced herself to face the situation. She opened her purse and found it empty. Where was the money coming from that was paying for her tiny apartment; that was buying food for herself and her children; that paid the woman who stayed on to look after them?

The answer was obvious: from Lewis!

"I must get strong quickly," thought Christine desperately. "I must get back to work. I can't let things go on like this."

She began to figure out how soon she could pay Lewis back from her meager salary at the Paradise and from the few extra checks which she occasionally received from the magazine which ran "Cabaret Sketches."

But the very next day Rosa came to see her, bringing her a spray of pink carnations. Her news sent Christine's heart to her very toes.

"Castlebeer has filled your place on the program," said Rosa. "He had to, because we had so few numbers anyway. He kept it open for a while, though, before he got this new dancer. She ain't so bad."

"Oh," said Christine, faintly. "I—I was hoping——"

Rosa looked at her pityingly.

"Ain't it the limit, the way troubles always come at once? But Castlebeer's sweet on you. He'll fire the other kid, if you say the word. It will be tough on her, though. She's got a paralyzed mother to support."

Christine turned her head away to hide the tears. No, she could never ask Castlebeer to discharge a girl who needed the money as badly as she herself did.

Her last hope vanished on the following day. She had written to the editor of the magazine, telling him that she was now well enough to launch the beauty department. His reply arrived—kindly but unmistakably final. He was very sorry to learn that she had been ill, and he hoped she was better now, but he had been unable to wait. Miss Finkel had taken over the beauty department; he was likewise sorry, but the magazine would be unable to use any more of the "Cabaret Sketches" at the present time. He felt that they had run long enough and that the readers were beginning to tire of the same series. Perhaps, later on—— In the meantime, if she had any short stories to submit he would be glad to give them his consideration.

Christine let the letter fall slowly from her fingers. Short stories, serials, when her hand was too weak even to grasp a pencil!

"What am I going to do?" she moaned, turning her face to the wall.

The children were out, and she was able to give way to her despair.

"What am I going to do?" she repeated. "I wish I could die—but I daren't die and leave the babies."

Then Lewis Hayes came. He opened before her a way which seemed to promise security and peace.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. W. A. EVANS

FIND CAUSE OF CHILD'S MALNUTRITION

WHEN a parent finds her child suffering from malnutrition, as defined by Miss Roberts in the Children's Bureau bulletin. "What is Malnutrition?" she finds the cause, or should. The day has passed for giving some condition powders, or lancing the gums, as the old style horse doctor does. There is a cause. The cause must be found and removed. If this is done the condition powders will work. Otherwise, they are in vain.

In Miss Roberts' list of causes, improper diet is listed as first in importance. Maybe it does not deserve to lead the procession, but she puts it there.

She stresses the need of a good breakfast, one that includes some milk, fruit, cereal, and maybe meat, eggs and bread, but no tea or coffee. With a child over two years of age the problem is how to get enough good quality food into the youngster to meet the needs due to growth, play and work. Unless he starts with a good breakfast the probability is that he will not get enough in spite of a good lunch and a good dinner, or good dinner and supper. If he eats sweets and titbits the chances are that he will not have stomach room or appetite for the bread, meat, milk and vegetables he needs.

Next in her procession of causes comes wrong food habits. "The child should eat regular, unhurried meals, and should not eat indiscriminately between meals."

Insufficient sleep is next from the head of the list. She thinks children should go to bed not later than 7 or 8 o'clock.

Chronic fatigue she lists fourth. However, some children are poorly nourished because they get too little exercise.

Enlarged or diseased tonsils or adenoids, decayed teeth, tuberculosis and syphilis are listed as causes of malnutrition.

It is a matter of general information that a large proportion of the children are already infected with tuberculosis. Most of those so infected are not consumptives in the ordinary sense. Most of them have no cough. But tucked away somewhere in the body is a nest of tubercle bacilli which are pouring a small amount of poison into the blood every day. The dose poured in is not great enough to cause a spell of definite sickness, but it is enough to cause the child to be "out of condition," as the stockmen would say.

It is not a matter of general information that inherited syphilis is also quite widespread and that it causes somewhat the same kind of vague "out of condition" that this child type of tuberculosis subinfection causes. I once knew and old-time country doctor who enjoyed a great reputation for helping rundown children especially. Maybe one reason was that he had a routine way of giving a fairly effective mild remedy for syphilis. Maybe that's why some of those old blood purifiers that contained iodide of potash seemed to help so many.

That disordered tonsils and adenoids belong in the list all will agree.

Miss Roberts says that ignorance and lack of parental control have displaced poverty as the leading cause of malnourishment.

JUST FOLKS

By EDGAR A. GUEST

THE HELPLESS HUSBAND.

I wish I knew where my shirts are hid,
I wish I knew where she keeps my duds,
I've opened up everything with a lid,
And I can't find trace of my evening studs.
And the socks I need—oh, where are they?
I'm a helpless thing when the wife's away!

It's vain to call, for she isn't here.
I've searched the place for my black bow tie,
It's strange how my things all disappear.
Oh, where is my handkerchief supply?
Some husbands may call this a holiday,
But I'm certainly lost when the wife's away.

Twenty years she has laid them out
Here on the bed when I've come to dress,
And now I go wandering about
Trying their hiding place to guess.
How she would laugh could she hear me say:
"I can't find a thing when my wife's away!"

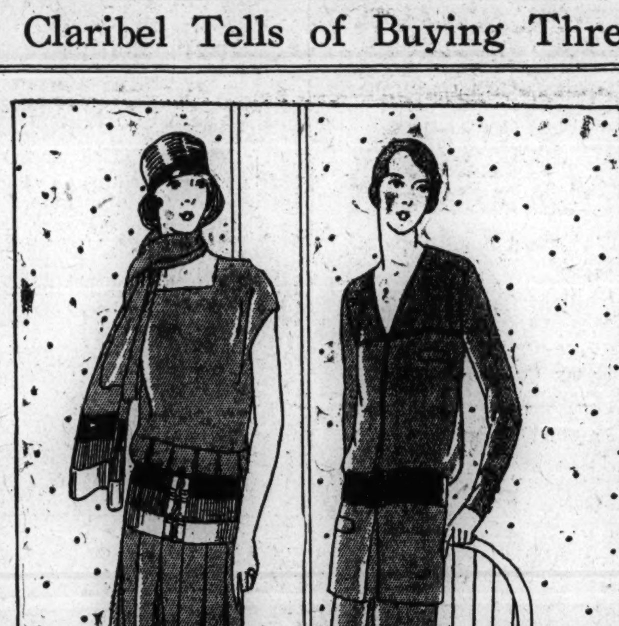
Claribel Tells of Buying Three New Dresses



DEAR Eve: The other day, Wednesday to be exact, in a moment of extreme weakness I bought these dresses. I don't believe that ever in my life I have bought three dresses all in one fell swoop! Usually I deliberate and change my mind and consider the matter from every angle and finally decide one way or another. Each of these is just what I have been looking for for a long time, and the reason I did not find them sooner was because they had not come from Paris.

The dress at the left is made of natural color, or beige, crepe tussur, and the skirt has box pleats. The belt is the straw that broke the back of the proverbial camel. It's too divine—no one could hold out against its three gay bands of grosgrain belting, one navy blue, one red and one green, that fasten with an amusing buckle that looks like a snake.

The scarf that goes with it has, at one end, the same three bands of color. I intend to wear it for luncheon at the seashore and golf when it is very hot.

The dress in the middle I got because one simply must have a dress for travel in the summer and to wear on occasional pilgrimages into the city. This is in two pieces and made of a tawny beige tweed and has a rather wide suede belt in dark brown that accents slender hips.

The third dress is white pleated crepe de chine and can be used as a dress for tennis or for informal afternoon tea. The scarf is a very chic plaid in three shades of chartreuse green, and the belt matches the darkest of these three. The belt is crepe de chine, too, but it is made over some stiffening that keeps it in shape. You can see in the drawing that the back is entirely plain, which saves the bother of forever having it re-pleated. I suppose even before you get my letter I will have seen at least a dozen more dresses that I shall long for—anyway, I shall have to be firm with myself. Love,

CLARIBEL.

WIVES OF TOMORROW

By FRANCES M'DONALD

Protecting Love.

DEAR Miss McDonald: I'm a daily reader of your articles so will you please advise me. I'm not a flapper, but do like wholesome recreation. I'm tall, neat, considered nice looking, good education and a business girl. My fiance did not have the advantage of going to school as I did. He is a hard worker, thoughtful, affectionate, &c. He tells me I'm the only one. I do believe he loves me. He'll do anything for me. For two years he has proven that. But he is jealous of every mere boy friend—even of my uncle and girls likewise. He calls every night, yet he does not trust me to go anywhere. When we go it's a quarrel. I can't reason with him in this matter. I don't go out with boys or girls. I care for him, yet will I weaken in the future years when he's so funny now? Must I marry him for his protecting love and goodness—and ignore his awful faults?

NINETEEN.

P. S.—Please publish, for I'm waiting for your advice. He is 26 years old.

Well, "protecting love and goodness" do help, but a decent disposition is a very necessary thing in marriage—and the man who makes his fiance miserable usually makes his wife look forward hopefully to widow's weeds. Of course, all jealousy springs from the newly discovered "inferiority complex"—that feeling of inability to compete and the arrogance that springs up at nature's command to ward off competition. The man who badgers his wife into fear of his jealousy succeeds in keeping other men away from her—which is the end he desires.

A normal man does not fear the other men. He reasons that if she likes him, and he continues to treat her well the chances are she won't do anything foolish. And he goes his way, puts on weight and lives serenely until his obituary appears. But the "little" fellow, who feels that any man could walk in and take everything he has and leave him helpless, puts up the only sort of fight he feels able for—a fight with a woman. He badgers, he sulks, he nags. He gives a perfect imitation of a bear with a sore ear. And presently the woman begins to wonder if all bears have sore ears. And after a while she notices the wonderful time John Jones always has at a party and the wonderful laugh he has and the wonderful time his girl always has, and she figures his wife would have a pretty jolly life of it and so after a while she marries John Jones to escape grunts, growls and blue devils.

That's all I can authoritatively tell you of jealousy and how it works out in the matrimonial economy. Personally I'd never want as a pet a bear with a sore ear. I'm sort of skeptical about his "protecting love," don't you know? Of course, I wouldn't for the world want to part you and your boy friend—I'm just speaking of myself—and how I would feel if I had to go through life with one ear always listening for a large growl from a mass of protecting love—what—have—you? I hope I haven't spoiled anything!

BEAUTY AND YOU

By VIOLA PARIS

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

DEAR VIOLA PARIS: I am 18 years old, 5 feet 2 inches tall and weigh 112 pounds. Do you think I weigh enough? My legs above the knee are entirely too thin. The lower parts are all right. How can I increase the size of the upper part? RAE.

Answer: Without knowing something about the bony structure of your body, it is impossible to guess weight with unfailing accuracy. According to the law of averages, however, your weight is certainly enough.

Exercise and massage with some substance such as cocoa butter or olive oil, both are helpful in developing the upper sections of the legs.

1. Lie flat on your back and raise your right leg straight into the air without bending the knee. Revolve the leg in a large circle three times. Lower the right leg and repeat the movement with the left. Alternate legs until the circle has been described twelve times with each leg.

2. Support yourself by leaning against something stationary, and swing the leg forward and backward like a pendulum. The higher you swing your legs, the more effective the exercise becomes.

In addition, all sports involving movements with the legs are helpful; swimming is particularly good. Massage with the oil mentioned before should be done with a firm rotary movement of the palm of the hand.

Dear Viola Paris: My legs are well developed except at the knees. How can I develop those parts?

MRS. L. O. M.

Answer: The general directions given "Rae" can be followed. The following exercises are also very good:

1. Lie flat on your back; bend the knees so that they touch the body. Hold them close to your chest for a few moments, return to first position and repeat.

2. Stand erect, bend the knees and raise the legs as high as you can, toes pointing downward. Do this 20 times with each leg.

3. Stand erect, bend knees and revolve the lower part of the leg in a circle—a similar movement as employed in chorus dancing work on the stage.

Dear Viola Paris: My back and shoulders are thin and bony and out of proportion with the rest of my body. How can I fill them out?

THANK YOU.

Answer: A nourishing diet should be followed. A list of the foods rich in nutriment are published in this column frequently. These exercises are beneficial:

1. Bend the head forward and slowly rotate it in a complete circle, using the neck as the axis. Do at least eight times.

2. Raise your shoulders as close to the lobe of the ear as possible about 20 times. Make this movement with more vigor than merely shrugging the shoulders.

3. Rotate the shoulder at the point where it is joined to the arm—as large a circle as you can describe.

All exercises with dumb-bells are good. To supplement these building exercises, massage cocoa butter or lanolin into the skin at night. Correct massage movements are given in my reply to "Rae."

Dear Viola Paris: How can I build up my face and neck? My cheeks and temples are sunken. What is good for oily hair? My hair is long but thin. What will make it abundant? What kind of cream or lotion should I start using now to prevent tan? I sunburn easily.

THANK YOU.

Answer: From the facts that your face is sunken and your hair is in poor condition, I gather that your general health is not all that could be desired. First of all, examine your mode of living. If your diet now includes quantities of meat, sweets, pastries, tea and coffee, give up these articles and eat plenty of fresh vegetables, salads, fresh fruits, milk, whole wheat bread and cereals, and drink from six to eight glasses of water a day. You probably require a great deal more rest than the average person. Nine hours are not too much. If possible, relax for a half hour during the day. Exercise in the fresh air, but do not tire yourself. Walking is a real beauty aid. Directions for localized exercise for developing the neck and massage instructions are given in the answer published above. Do not, however, use the lanolin or cocoa butter on your face. A nutrient cream made by a recognized specialist should be applied to the face at night and a thin film left on the skin during the sleeping hours. As your general health improves, so will the condition of your scalp. Do not make the mistake of shampooing your hair to frequently. Once a fortnight is often enough. Between shampoos, a drying tonic should be massaged into the scalp. I am sorry I can not give trade names in this column. Nightly massage with the finger tips will exercise your scalp and stimulate the hair growth. A protective lotion should be applied before powdering to prevent sunburn.

Conduct and Common Sense

By ANNE SINGLETON

TOO SENSITIVE.

I HEARD a story the other day about a young woman who was offended with another young woman for—as she supposed—slighting her in the matter of an introduction. Miss Sensitive, it appeared, had always known Miss Sensible. They had lived in the same town before coming to New York. Miss Sensible came first and was well established in her own position when Miss Sensitive arrived looking for a job. This her friend interested herself in helping her to obtain. It happened to be in a shop, and Miss Sensitive took it and appeared content. One day Miss Sensible and a fellow business head came into the shop. Miss Sensible asked for Miss Sensitive and, as she saw her coming, stepped forward to meet her. In the meantime, Miss Sensible's companion began to talk to the official she had come to see. Miss Sensible had a friendly chat with Miss Sensitive and when her fellow head was ready to go they went. Now, it appears, Miss Sensitive imagines herself unkindly treated because Miss Sensible did not make a point of introducing her to the other lady, whose interests, at the moment, were quite elsewhere.

Really, this seems to me great nonsense, and it also indicates an inferiority complex on the part of Miss Sensitive. Why should she care, in the middle of busy affairs, whether she was made known to a perfectly strange woman or not? Unless she imagined that some higher social recognition was being denied her (which immediately makes her place herself far down in the scale), what possible difference could it make? She was not neglected by her friend, and that's the only thing that need have troubled her.

I have no patience with this sort of oversensibility. People can only hurt my feelings when they mean to—and not always then. If my family or some of my very intimate friends were unkind to me, doubtless I should resent it. But I should never be troubled because the friend of a friend who was having a hasty talk with me had not been introduced. I should think well of myself not to imagine any slight could have been intended.

NOW, I'LL ASK ONE!

Everybody's doing it! Get in the swim. Test your knowledge, and that of your friends. It is a delightful game and is educational at the same time. Printed below are ten questions. If any of them stump you, you will find the answers on the last page.

QUESTIONS.

1. How many stars are there in the U. S. Flag?
2. Who won the Catalina Channel swim?
3. What was Columbus looking for when he discovered America?
4. Did Daniel Webster or Noah Webster write the dictionary?
5. What is a quadruped?
6. What did the Indians call the early American settlers?
7. Who was the first president of the German republic?
8. What is a seismograph?
9. What is the scientific name for the northern lights?
10. In Bible history, what king went mad and ate grass?

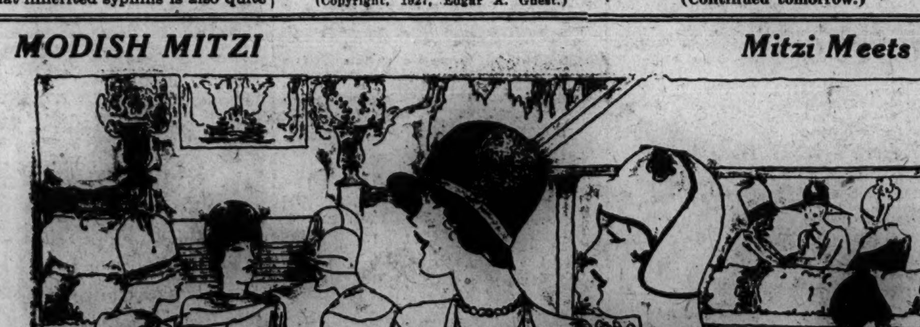
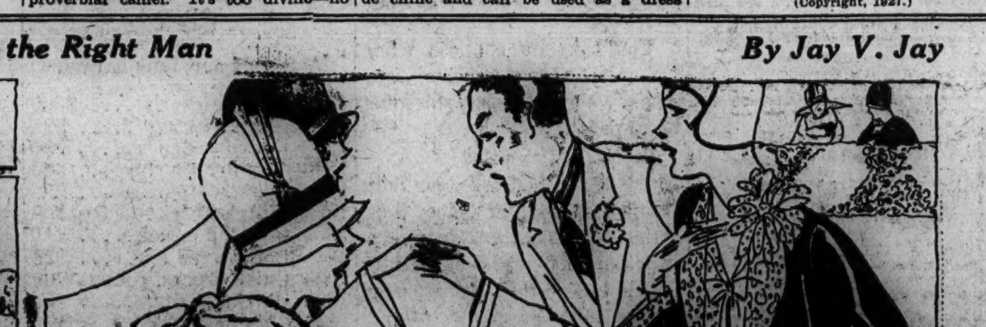
MODISH MITZI

Mitzi Meets the Right Man

By Jay V. Jay



"He's to the right of the woman wearing the skull cap with the widow's peak in front," whispers Polly to Mitzi as they tea at the Ritz—a place in Paris of superlative smartness. "He's been looking at you," says Polly, "rather hard," turning her head so that the side of her felt hat with the pastel-colored felt flowers show most effectively. The brim, yes, brims are growing—ripples the least bit over one ear. "Perhaps," ventures Mitzi, "He is being sort of * * * well, French."



Mitzi found out very soon. The gentleman was introduced by a friend of theirs. Yes, he admires Mitzi. He doesn't hesitate to tell her so. He has been completely captured by her ensemble, by her chiffon dress and silk coat lined with the same material, by the flower of chiffon in harmony with it! He didn't say this, of course. Mitzi inferred it by his bow. It happens that he must attend an opening—oh, a matter of business, of course—and he wonders if perhaps Mitzi would accompany him? Would she? Well, he's just the man she's been looking for. In all of Paris, he is the right person!

Women's Simpler Hygiene

More absorbent—Discards like tissue

By ELLEN J. BUCKLAND
Registered Nurse

ALL the problems of old-time hygienic ways have recently been ended, largely because of a new product called Kotex.

✓ Kotex discards as easily as tissue. Thus no laundry, no embarrassment of disposal.

Being 5 times as absorbent as ordinary cotton "pads," you wear lightest gowns and frocks without slightest fear. Deodorizes, too, thus ending all fear of offense.

Obtain at any store without embarrassment simply by saying "Kotex." Many stores have it already wrapped on counters, ready for you to pick up and take along without even asking for it.

Try today and you'll never again risk the uncertainty of old ways. Box contains 12. Be sure to get the genuine. Only Kotex itself is "like" Kotex.

BROWNS ROUT NATS, 9-1, WITH ZACHARY PITCHING; TILDEN BOWS TO LACOSTE IN THROBBING MATCH

U. S. Net Star Beaten in 5 Sets

French Ace Triumphs in Final Game, 11-9, for Title.

Loser's Temperament Evident as Playing Thrills 8,000.

ST. CLOUD, France, June 5 (By A. P.).—William T. Tilden's series of triumphs over European tennis stars ended here today when after a five-set struggle he was defeated by the French ace, Rene Lacoste, in the final of the international hard-court championships. The score was 6—4, 4—6, 5—7, 6—3, 11—9.

It was a heart-breaking, nerve-wracking match that lasted 3 hours and 31 minutes. It provided every thrill ever imagined in a tennis contest, including arguments between linesmen and players and an outburst from the 8,000 spectators, largest crowd that ever watched a tennis match in France.

Strategy was the keynote, and for the first three sets carefulness dominated the two gladiators of the courts. The 8,000 spectators, failing to understand the beautiful technique of play and the conflict of two well-planned campaigns, were rather somnolent.

Then, with Tilden two sets to one, Lacoste began the gallant fight which squared the match amid enthusiasm such as had been seen seldom if ever in the history of sport in France.

While the crowd was keyed to most intense emotion in the third set with the score at 3-all, LaCoste injured a leg in trying to return one of Tilden's cannonballs. Thereafter for the remaining games of the set he limped badly, once sitting down beside the baseline. Courageously resuming play, he finally lost the set, 5-7. Both Tilden and Lacoste appeared exhausted at the end of the match.

His nerves on edge, the American master played erratic tennis, rising to heights of magnificence only to lose his fire and dash in moments of pique at decisions he considered unfair.

Even before the match, while Tilden and Lacoste were exchanging practice shots, the tall American showed the effect of the strain on his high strung temperament. A spectator, failing to find his seat, was knocked down by others in the gallery and a fist fight followed. Tilden walked over and remonstrated, then when play began served two double faults and lost his service at love.

Steadying, the American gained the lead, 4-2, only to have the Frenchman run out of the next four and the set. Errors ruled and earned points were few.

In the second set Tilden began using a chop stroke, dropping the ball right over the net and winning the first two games. Both players were intent on keeping the ball in play and there were as many as 40 and even 50 returns for a single point. However, Tilden's taut nerves showed again when a dirigible passed over the field and he looked up for a moment, then losing three games in a row.

The third set saw the players resorting to every possible trick of the game, including change of pace and deep lobs. Then cam the first

Cullop Sent to Cleveland By Nats in Outright Sale

Utility Player Is Sold for Bit More Than Waiver Price.

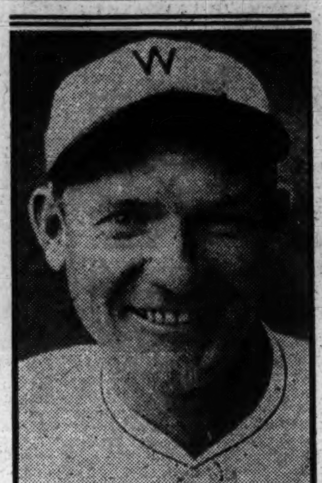
By FRANK H. YOUNG.

OUTFIELDER NICK CULLOP, who has been filling a utility role with the Nationals, yesterday was sold to the Cleveland Indians, President Clark Griffith completing the deal over long-distance telephone last night.

Waivers were asked on the player some time ago, all clubs but the Tribe turning "thumbs down" on him. With only one team wanting him, this gave the Washington Club the privilege of doing a little bargaining, Griffith finally closing the deal for a little better than the usual waiver price. Cullop will remain here and swap uniforms when the Tribe invades the Capital for the series which starts tomorrow. That a deal involving Cullop was being arranged was exclusively stated in The Post several days ago.

Although he has hit no better than .217 in the parts of 15 games he has played with the Nats, his record being 5 hits, including 2 doubles, in 23 trips to the plate, Cullop bears the reputation of being a real slugger and probably will live up to it if used regularly. His name was erased from the Harrisian pay roll, because Manager Harris believes that Earl McNeely, Sammy West and Ollie Tucker can take care of all of the utility fly-chasing duties.

Because of Cullop's ability to play first base, it was thought that he would be given "right of way" over the others, but Manager Harris has been giving Tris Speaker a trial during Joe Judge's incapacitation because of a "charley horse" attack, and evidently believes that the former Indian can satisfactorily fill the bill in the few emergencies of this kind expected.



Hugh Miller, Post Staff Photographer.
NICK CULLOP

By June 15, all of the clubs must have reduced their personnel to 25 players, the departure of Cullop bring-

352 Golfers In Columbia Tourney

George Voigt, Hufty and Other Stars Will Compete.

All Clubs Represented in Meet to Open Wednesday.

By HENRY LITCHFIELD WEST.

WITH an unprecedented entry list, aggregating 352 names, the annual invitation tournament of the Columbia Country Club will begin Wednesday morning, with Wednesday and Thursday devoted to a qualification round of eighteen holes. On the first day, play will commence at 7:30 o'clock in the morning, and the last pair will not start until 4:35 o'clock in the afternoon, with the probability that darkness will be settling over the course before the final putt is holed out.

George J. Voigt, consistent winner of local tournaments, has entered, together with Page Hufty, of the Congressional Club, who has been his opponent in several final rounds.

All of the local clubs are represented with their best golfing talent, although the only low-handicap entry from Chevy Chase is Reginald Loftus. There will be nearly 50 out-of-town competitors, Baltimore sending an unusually large delegation.

Six sixteens will qualify, and these 96 players will comprise only about one-fourth of the entry list, especially if, as is anticipated, a large number of post entries are received today and tomorrow.

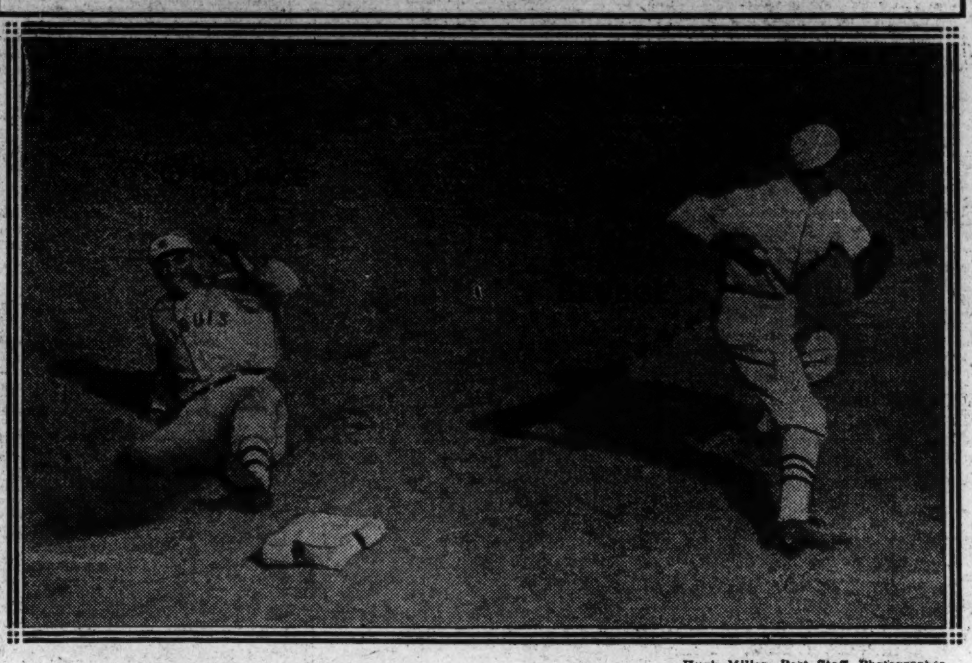
O'ROURKE "HITS THE DIRT" AT THIRD BASE



Hugh Miller, Post Staff Photographer.

The St. Louis third baseman who used to play for Washington advanced all the way to third base in the sixth inning when Adams, another former National, singled to center field. Bluege received the relay from the outfield too late to tag O'Rourke, and is seen throwing to second in an attempt to cut off Adams, who took an extra base on the throw-in.

PARE BEATEN BY BOWMAN IN 3 SETS

New York Regimental Tennis Team Beats Racquet Club.

HERBERT BOWMAN, of the New York Seventh Regiment Armory Tennis Team, National ranking player No. 29, defeated Emmett Pare, of the Racquet Club in the feature match of the day at Wardman Park Courts yesterday. New York defeated Washington 5 to 4.

Washington won three of the singles matches when Charest downed Rockefellow, Mitchell winning over Cunningham, and Considine defeating Cragin, but Harding and Gore scored the only doubles victory of the Washington team, defeating Cragin and Cunningham.

New York, June 5 (By A. P.).—Rogers Hornsby, of the New York Giants, has dethroned Ty Cobb, of the Athletics, as the leading batsman of the "big eight" in the majors. The former Cardinal manager has been keeping the pace set by Babe Ruth for extra base hits, both being credited with 26 apiece. The Babe leads the field in the number of runs scored, however, with 51.

YANKEES WIN; 17TH HOMER FOR RUTH

45,000 See Tigers Outhit New York and Lose, 5-3.

NEW YORK, June 5 (By A. P.).—The New York Yankees made it two out of three in the series with the Detroit Tigers by winning today's game by 5 to 3, Babe Ruth turning out his seventeenth home run of the year in the sixth inning with none on. Although the Yankees were outhit by 12 to 6, they took advantage of their opportunities.

Ruth put New York ahead with his homer, and when the Tigers tied the count, his single in the eighth drove in what proved to be the winning run.

Owing to a rainstorm, the game was held up an hour and 20 minutes. More than 45,000 fans were at the stadium.

Harris Replaces Seven Players in Effort to Check Foes.

By SHIRLEY L. POVICH
Sports Editor, The Post

WITH the help of a few former Washington players now associated with the St. Louis Browns, the Washington ball team kept its losing streak intact yesterday, and as a matter of record, accepted its third consecutive defeat with the Browns again the amiable donors. The Washington team today is firmly implanted in sixth place in the league standing.

The sordid details of the game—it was not a contest—reveal that the Washington team is no despised contender for sixth place if the Detroit Tigers and Boston Red Sox do not improve. While absorbing a 9-to-1 defeat yesterday, Washington gave indications of providing stubborn opposition for the Tigers and Red Sox, who at present are ensconced in the last two places of the second division of the American League.

Four ball players dismissed from the Washington team a few years ago because they couldn't make the grade or were deemed of no importance to the team, were quite important members of the Browns yesterday.

Tom Zachary, a left-handed pitcher, was one of those players, and if Bucky Harris didn't think well of him two years ago when he was traded to the Browns, his opinion ought to be considerably altered this morning.

Spencer Adams and "Blackie" O'Rourke, St. Louis infielders, also played with Washington once upon a time and disported themselves as thoroughly at home in the Washington park. As their share of the attack against Garland Braxton and George Murray, O'Rourke banged out four hits and Adams three. "Bing" Miller, who also used to play for Washington and couldn't make the grade at the time, was in a St. Louis uniform yesterday and very much in evidence. He drove in enough runs to beat the Nats single handed.

Manager Harris worked his squad in relays yesterday but the Browns were not to be misled. Even though Harris replaced seven ball players with seven others just as poor, the Browns could not distinguish any difference and continued their assaults right up until the end of the game.

Seven Washington rookies replaced the regulars in the seventh inning and while it did not appear that they could play any worse than did the regulars they did. They showed the regulars some new kinds of wild throws and were just as ineffective at bat, while George Murray proved no better than Garland Braxton in tring to check the Browns.

Zachary was a failure—at bat. He struck out three times. But in the pitcher's box—if he were a failure so was Lindbergh. Zachary allowed six hits and the left-handed curve balls which used to win games for Washington were a boomerang yesterday.

The one run he allowed was the result of a triple by Goslin and a single by Speaker in the sixth inning.

Fred Schulte, who was purchased by the Browns for $100,000 or the equivalent in ball players, was something of a batting star yesterday. He connected for three two-base hits.

Biding their time against Braxton, the Browns did not score until the fourth inning, when "Bing" Miller started off with a two-base hit to right field. Schulte drove him home and

THE Georgetown A. C. Team scored Washington's first victory in the Intercity Semipro League yesterday but it came at the expense of a District club—the famous Shamrocks—by a 15-10 score. At Annapolis, Bethlehem Steel made it two in a row by defeating Eastport, 8 to 3, while at Baltimore, the Hampteds won their second straight at the expense of the Reina Mercedes Club.

The Shamrocks were beaten at their own game in the Hollow yesterday—slugging. Players of both teams dug their toes in an walloped the ball to all courts of the ancient grounds.

Four homers were recorded with each team getting two. Hager and Robbins supplied the circuit clouts for the Georgetown Club while Hamel and Mattingly did the trick for the Harps. Six pitchers were used in the game. Chaconas and Smithson led their respective teams at bat.

Harris and Quintino hooked up in a pitchers' battle in which the former had a slight edge, allowing five hits and fanning ten batters. Four runs in the third inning decided the game.

Brown continued his heavy hitting for the Hampsteds, while Miller got two of the Sailors' safeties. The winners played errorless ball.

Annapolis, Md., June 5.—Eastport dropped its second game of the Intercity series this afternoon. Bethlehem Steel Co. of Baltimore turned the trick, 8 to 3.

The locals got off to an early lead, scoring a run in each the first, third and fifth innings. Newby Catlin, Eastport star southpaw, held the visitors at bay until the sixth session. Then they began to land on him with the result that they got a brace of runs in that frame and a like number in the seventh.

The Steel men, however, continued to hammer the ball after Simons relieved Catlin an added a quartet of tallies in the eighth. Burdine, of Eastport, was the batting star of the game. He laced out two homers and a single and was credited with a sacrifice out of four trips to the plate. Both of his homers cleared the center field fence.

TILDEN LOSES SINGLES TO LACOSTE

foot fault called against Tilden—the first ever called in the history of the French championship. An argument ensued, but Tilden won the set at 7—5.

Twice later Tilden was accused of stepping over the line and each of the three faults was called by an American judge. Alan Muhr, who resides in France and is prominent in French athletics. Heated arguments ensued between Tilden and Muhr, the player being especially upset over a decision in the fourth set.

Decisions made by Henri Cochet, French player whom Tilden defeated in the semifinal, never were questioned, but Tilden twice showed disapproval of decisions by Pierre Gillou, captain of the French Davis cup team and another of the linesmen chosen for the important match.

After a rubdown at the clubhouses the players returned for the fourth set and Lacoste took charge of the situation. He allowed Tilden only three games in the set although Tilden led.

In the fifth set with the score 5—4 in Lacoste's favor, Tilden requested Muhr to watch his service closely, then served four straight aces making the crucial set five all. The American finally pushed the count to 9—8 in his favor, only to have Lacoste take the last three games and the match from an obviously dispirited and downcast opponent.

"Completely knocked out," was the decision of the spectators as the players limped off the courts after the most gruelling five-set match ever seen in France. "I have nothing to say," said Tilden. "You saw the match. You can draw your own conclusions."

Lacoste said: "I'm glad I won. I'm sorry it was played under such trying conditions."

COLLYER'S COMMENT on the SPORT of KINGS

BY BERT E. COLLYER

GOOD things! Usually those "wash day" offerings are rather tough, but members of my $10,000-a-month clocking staff throughout the country have sent to headquarters what they consider some likely winners for Monday, with a few "good things" thrown in for extra measure.

Over in Canada the chief of staff sends the happy gab that EDDIE RICKEBACKER is the real hot tamale of the afternoon. He adds that CAREFREE probably will be withdrawn, saying, "if EDDIE does not go, just shift your wager over to CAREFREE."

The Canadian card is not a bad one. HOLE CARD has been dropped into a supposedly soft spot and the proper connections have placed a heavy commission. The real article for chance takers, however, is GAYLY, which goes in the third race. This one has been scratched four times in a row, so have a care.

Manager Hay has made it tough on the boys out at Washington Park. Those who can pick winners at this track will earn all they get. It appears, however, that H. G. Bedwell, the dynamite kid, should send a couple of winners to the post during the aft. In the fifth spasm he will have an entry to saddle, while in sixth heat FORELAND will measure strides with some ordinary ones.

AVIATOR did not do so well on Friday over at Fairmount, but, then, it must be remembered that there are days and days, and then some more days. Looks as though the spot has been made to order, so if you don't collect here, don't blame me for not slipping you the "good thing." More anon.

RYAN TWIRLS MARYLAND TO WIN

Allows Bolling Field but 2 Hits—Team Scores, 4 to 0.

RYAN, pitching for the Maryland Athletic Club, held Bolling Field to only two hits, while his teammates turned five hits into a 4-to-0 victory. The victory broke up Bolling Field's winning streak of sixteen games.

Varnell, in right field for the winners, kept Bolling Field from scoring by a wonderful peg to the plate. Boucher, at short, also starred in the field.

Yanks Claim McNulty Indian Outfielder

Cleveland, Ohio, June 5 (By A. P.).—Pat McNulty, an outfielder for the Cleveland Indians, received notice at Philadelphia today that the New York Yankees have claimed him by the waiver route, pairing the Tribe down to the player limit of 25 made McNulty's release necessary. Manager Jack McCallister said.

Although a fast runner and a good hitter when used regularly, McNulty never mastered the outfield assignment to suit Tris Speaker or McCallister.

BAND TEAM WINS EASILY.

NATS BEATEN BY BROWNS, 9 TO 1

the Browns resumed the attack in the next inning with a three-run blast.

Gerber led off with a single to center and Zachary struck out, but O'Rourke beat out a hit to Rigney and Gerber scored on Adams' single to Bucky Harris, who muffed a hard chance. With a double play in sight, Braxton elected to throw Sisler out at first base and then the blushing Mr. Miller stepped into the contest with a single to left field that cleaned two teammates right off the bases.

Two were out when the Browns scored two runs in the sixth. Gerber walked and Zachary advanced him to third with a single. O'Rourke advanced him across the plate with a hit past Oswald Bluege, who made an ineffectual dive for the ball.

The Nats rallied gallantly in the sixth and scored a run for their efforts. With two out Goslin tripled to deep right center and scored on Speaker's hit down the third base line. These two hits constituted the entire effectiveness of the Washington attack.

With the game lost, barring the appearance of the New York Yankees on the field in place of the Washington team, Manager Harris replaced seven of his ball players with seven younger ones, who evidently had learned a lot from their teammates.

Murray pitched, Tate caught, Cullop played first base, Stewart second, Reeves shortstop and McNeely and Tucker in the outfield. The Browns immediately scored a run. "Bing" Miller led off with a hit and Schulte walked. Bluege picked up Gerber's grounder and threw the ball so far past Cullop that Miller easily scored from second base.

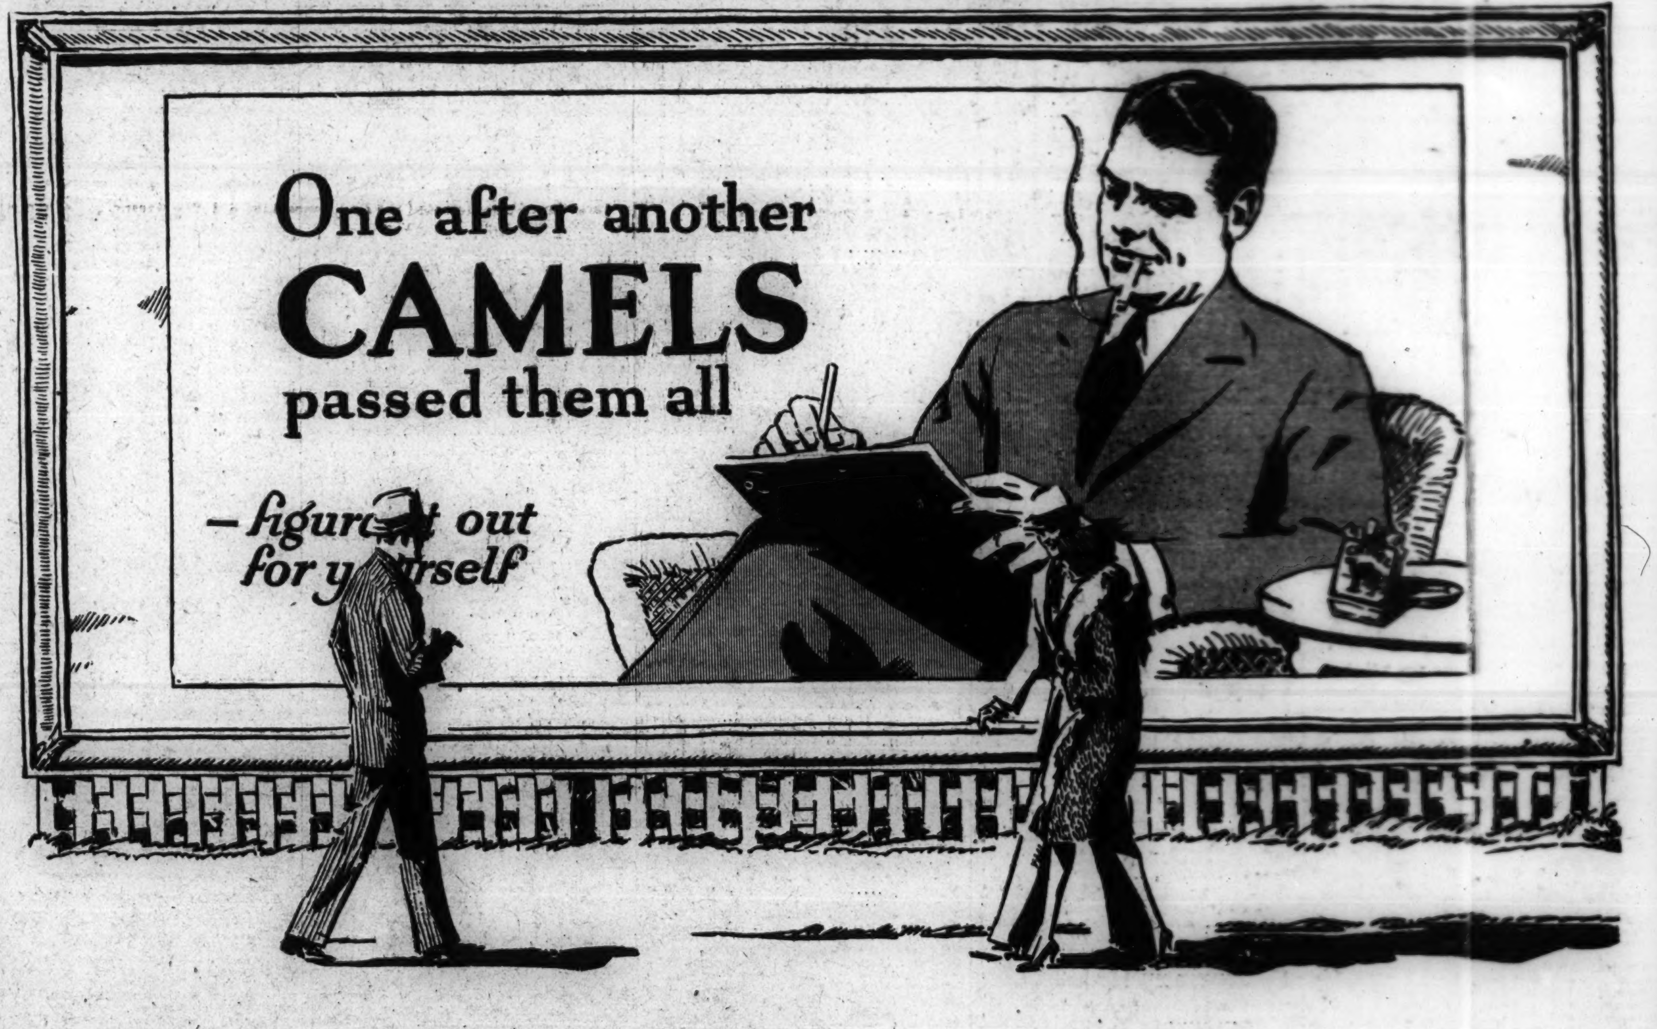
The Browns didn't score in the eighth. But in the ninth they shoved two more runs. H. Rice tripled to center field and scored on Schulte's two-base hit in the same vicinity. Schulte went to third on a sacrifice and scored when Reeves picked up Gerber's grounder and flung the ball between Tate's legs in an effort to head off Schulte at home.

AVALONS DEFEAT DUBRIC A. C.

The Avalon A. C. nosed out the Dubric A. C., 7 to 6, yesterday in an exciting game on the former's diamond. Brown of the winners limited the Dubric batters to five hits.

AMERICAN MIDGETS WIN.

The American Midgets defeated the International Midgets yesterday 5 to 1. Petit allowed the losers only two hits.



IT'S the cigarette of the age—the triumph of all smoking history. Just reflect—at the time when more cigarettes are smoked than ever before—Camels passed them all.

Why? Figure it out and you'll find that Camel is made for the particular smoker whose taste, day by day, is more knowing of quality. Camels are rolled of the choicest Turkish and Domestic tobaccos grown. And what blending! Camel's smoothness and mellowness are qualities distinctive to this cigarette.

If you haven't yet tried them, you'll find all your smoking wishes come true in Camels. Mild, clear and smooth from morning to night. Always so satisfyingly good! "Have a Camel!"

THE Georgetown A. C. Team scored Washington's first victory in the Intercity Semipro League yesterday but it came at the expense of a District club—the famous Shamrocks—by a 15-10 score. At Annapolis, Bethlehem Steel made it two in a row by defeating Eastport, 8 to 3, while at Baltimore, the Hampteds won their second straight at the expense of the Reina Mercedes Club.

The Shamrocks were beaten at their own game in the Hollow yesterday—slugging. Players of both teams dug their toes in an walloped the ball to all courts of the ancient grounds.

Four homers were recorded with each team getting two. Hager and Robbins supplied the circuit clouts for the Georgetown Club while Hamel and Mattingly did the trick for the Harps. Six pitchers were used in the game. Chaconas and Smithson led their respective teams at bat.

Harris and Quintino hooked up in a pitchers' battle in which the former had a slight edge, allowing five hits and fanning ten batters. Four runs in the third inning decided the game.

Brown continued his heavy hitting for the Hampsteds, while Miller got two of the Sailors' safeties. The winners played errorless ball.

Annapolis, Md., June 5.—Eastport dropped its second game of the Intercity series this afternoon. Bethlehem Steel Co. of Baltimore turned the trick, 8 to 3.

The locals got off to an early lead, scoring a run in each the first, third and fifth innings. Newby Catlin, Eastport star southpaw, held the visitors at bay until the sixth session. Then they began to land on him with the result that they got a brace of runs in that frame and a like number in the seventh.

The Steel men, however, continued to hammer the ball after Simons relieved Catlin an added a quartet of tallies in the eighth. Burdine, of Eastport, was the batting star of the game. He laced out two homers and a single and was credited with a sacrifice out of four trips to the plate. Both of his homers cleared the center field fence.

TILDEN LOSES SINGLES TO LACOSTE

foot fault called against Tilden—the first ever called in the history of the French championship. An argument ensued, but Tilden won the set at 7—5.

Twice later Tilden was accused of stepping over the line and each of the three faults was called by an American judge, Alan Muhr, who resides in France and is prominent in French athletics. Heated arguments ensued between Tilden and Muhr, the player being especially upset over a decision in the fourth set.

Decisions made by Henri Cochet, French player whom Tilden defeated in the semifinal, never were questioned, but Tilden twice showed disapproval of decisions by Pierre Gillou, captain of the French Davis cup team and another of the linesmen chosen for the important match.

After a rubdown at the clubhouses the players returned for the fourth set and Lacoste took charge of the situation. He allowed Tilden only three games in the set although Tilden led.

In the fifth set with the score 5—4 in Lacoste's favor, Tilden requested Muhr to watch his service closely, then served four straight aces making the crucial set five all. The American finally pushed the count to 9—8 in his favor, only to have Lacoste take the last three games and the match from an obviously dispirited and downcast opponent.

"Completely knocked out," was the decision of the spectators as the players limped off the courts after the most gruelling five-set match ever seen in France. "I have nothing to say," said Tilden. "You saw the match. You can draw your own conclusions."

Lacoste said: "I'm glad I won. I'm sorry it was played under such trying conditions."

By BERT E. COLLYER

GOOD things! Usually those "wash day" offerings are rather tough, but members of my $10,000-a-month clocking staff throughout the country have sent to headquarters what they consider some likely winners for Monday, with a few "good things" thrown in for extra measure.

Over in Canada the chief of staff sends the happy gab that EDDIE RICKEBACKER is the real hot tamale of the afternoon. He adds that CAREFREE probably will be withdrawn, saying, "if EDDIE does not go, just shift your wager over to CAREFREE."

The Canadian card is not a bad one. HOLE CARD has been dropped into a supposedly soft spot and the proper connections have placed a heavy commission. The real article for chance takers, however, is GAYLY, which goes in the third race. This one has been scratched four times in a row, so have a care.

Manager Hay has made it tough on the boys out at Washington Park. Those who can pick winners at this track will earn all they get. It appears, however, that H. G. Bedwell, the dynamite kid, should send a couple of winners to the post during the aft. In the fifth spasm he will have an entry to saddle, while in sixth heat FORELAND will measure strides with some ordinary ones.

AVIATOR did not do so well on Friday over at Fairmount, but, then, it must be remembered that there are days and days, and then some more days. Looks as though the spot has been made to order, so if you don't collect here, don't blame me for not slipping you the "good thing." More anon.

RYAN TWIRLS MARYLAND TO WIN

Allows Bolling Field but 2 Hits—Team Scores, 4 to 0.

RYAN, pitching for the Maryland Athletic Club, held Bolling Field to only two hits, while his teammates turned five hits into a 4-to-0 victory. The victory broke up Bolling Field's winning streak of sixteen games.

Varnell, in right field for the winners, kept Bolling Field from scoring by a wonderful peg to the plate. Boucher, at short, also starred in the field.

Yanks Claim McNulty Indian Outfielder

Cleveland, Ohio, June 5 (By A. P.).—Pat McNulty, an outfielder for the Cleveland Indians, received notice at Philadelphia today that the New York Yankees have claimed him by the waiver route, pairing the Tribe down to the player limit of 25 made McNulty's release necessary. Manager Jack McCallister said.

Although a fast runner and a good hitter when used regularly, McNulty never mastered the outfield assignment to suit Tris Speaker or McCallister.

BAND TEAM WINS EASILY.

NATS BEATEN BY BROWNS, 9 TO 1

the Browns resumed the attack in the next inning with a three-run blast.

Gerber led off with a single to center and Zachary struck out, but O'Rourke beat out a hit to Rigney and Gerber scored on Adams' single to Bucky Harris, who muffed a hard chance. With a double play in sight, Braxton elected to throw Sisler out at first base and then the blushing Mr. Miller stepped into the contest with a single to left field that cleaned two teammates right off the bases.

Two were out when the Browns scored two runs in the sixth. Gerber walked and Zachary advanced him to third with a single. O'Rourke advanced him across the plate with a hit past Oswald Bluege, who made an ineffectual dive for the ball.

The Nats rallied gallantly in the sixth and scored a run for their efforts. With two out Goslin tripled to deep right center and scored on Speaker's hit down the third base line. These two hits constituted the entire effectiveness of the Washington attack.

With the game lost, barring the appearance of the New York Yankees on the field in place of the Washington team, Manager Harris replaced seven of his ball players with seven younger ones who evidently had learned a lot from their teammates.

Murray pitched, Tate caught, Cullop played first base, Stewart second, Reeves shortstop and McNeely and Tucker in the outfield. The Browns immediately scored a run. "Bing" Miller led off with a hit and Schulte walked. Ruege picked up Gerber's grounder and threw the ball so far past Cullop that Miller easily scored from second base.

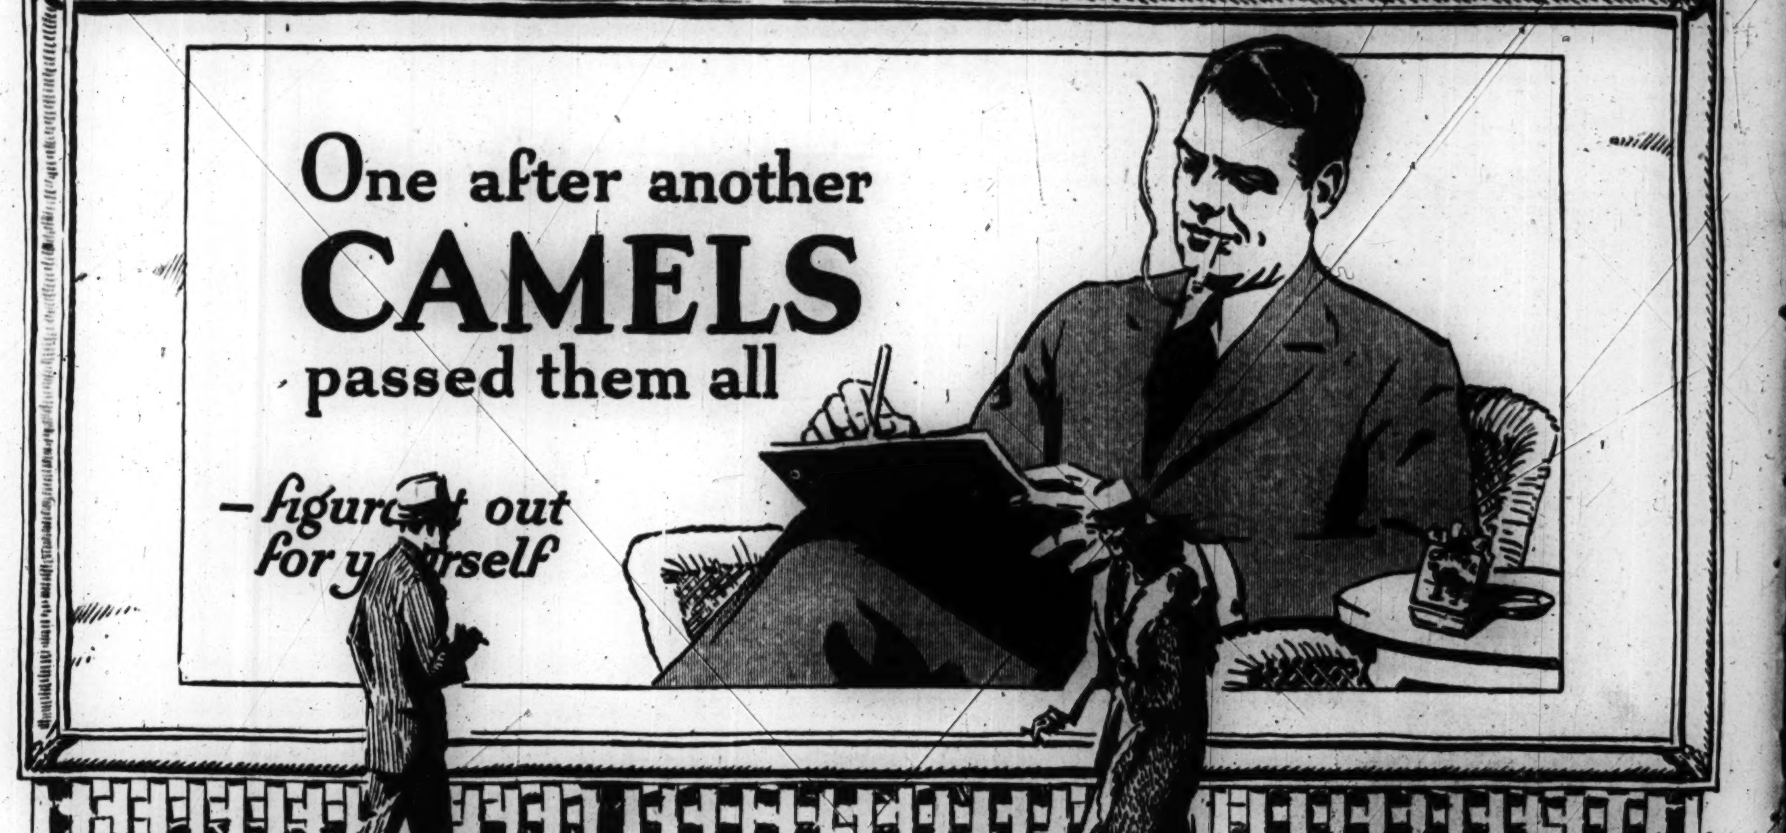
The Brown's didn't score in the eighth. But in the ninth they scored two more runs. H. Rice tripled to center field and scored on Schulte's two-base hit in the same vicinity. Schulte went to third on a sacrifice and scored when Reeves picked up Gerber's grounder and flung the ball between Tate's legs in an effort to head off Schulte at home.

AVALONS DEFEAT DUBRIC A. C.

The Avalon A. C. nosed out the Dubric A. C., 7 to 6, yesterday in an exciting game on the former's damond. Brown of the winners limited the Dubric batters to five hits.

AMERICAN MIDGETS WIN.

The American Midgets defeated the International Midgets yesterday 5 to 1. Pettit allowed the losers only two hits.



IT'S the cigarette of the age — the triumph of all smoking history. Just reflect—at the time when more cigarettes are smoked than ever before—Camels passed them all.

Why? Figure it out and you'll find that Camel is made for the particular smoker whose taste, day by day, is more knowing of quality. Camels are rolled of the choicest Turkish and Domestic tobaccos grown. And what blending! Camel's smoothness and mellowness are qualities distinctive to this cigarette.

If you haven't yet tried them, you'll find all your smoking wishes come true in Camels. Mild, clear and smooth from morning to night. Always so satisfyingly good! "Have a Camel!"

Ballston Wins Over Modoc, 16 to 8

St. Joe Stops Rialto, 9-8, in 10th; Hartfords Score.

Addison Cops at Fort, 11-7; N. E. Motors Beat Stephens.

BALLSTON, St. Joseph's, Addison, Northeast Motors and Hartford were the victorious clubs in the first day's play of the Capital City League's unlimited championship series. Ballston carried a twelve-game winning streak into the series by defeating the Modocs, 16 to 8, in a West section game.

The other West contests found Addison an 11-7 winner over Fort Myer, last year's Arlington County champions and the St. Joseph clubmen, 9-to-8 victors over Rialto in a brilliant ten-inning struggle on the Friendship diamond.

The triumph of the Northeast Motorists came at the expense of the Stephens A. C. on the latter's grounds at East Riverdale. In the other East section game the Hartfords beat Hess, 8 to 2.

Ballston was forced to come from behind to keep its winning streak intact. King, the star hurler, pulled up with a lame arm, giving way to Harrison who pitched splendid ball. Baker came through with some timely hitting that was an important factor in the defeat of the Modocs.

Ragged fielding on both sides, combined with lusty clouting, made the Rialto-St. Joe clash anybody's game. Rialto came from behind to tie the score and took the lead in the first half of the tenth only to have the Saints rally for two runs and the honors. Naples and Hanback, outfielders were the batting heroes for St. Joe.

"Pepco" Barry and Eddie Cinotti, two young infielders, have earned regular berths with the Saints. Both starred in senior ranks last year.

Despite the score of the Rialto-St. Joe game, Tom Stolle, former Marine pitcher, turned in a mighty creditable performance for the Saints. He fanned fifteen batters and would probably have won with much in reserve had his teammates given him better support.

Bill McLean, Fort Myer's big righthander and star of the victories of the Soldiers in the Arlington series last year, failed to fool the Addison batters yesterday and was forced to leave the game under fire. Addison carried on against two other Fort hurlers for sixteen hits.

Rapp, Cumberland and Darnes got three bingles each. Southwell Brown made a good job of the Addison pitching assignment. Three homers were made during the struggle. Rapp, Cumberland and Ritchey were the contributors.

Northeast Motors combined good pitching with hard hitting to trounce Stephens. Inscoe supplied the hurling. He allowed five hits and kept them scattered for the most part. McCoy, Hook and Murray led the attack, the latter getting a homer.

The Hartfords made all of their nine hits count in their victory over the Hess A. C. on the Bladensburg Field. Five runs scored in the fourth inning on a combination of hits and errors put the game beyond reach of the Hessmen. Four hits was the total damage done to the deliveries of Hammond and Van Laudingham by the Hess batters.

The latter was in particularly good form, fanning ten and allowing only a scratch single in five innings. Fitzgerald, Hall and E. Bauman were the leading hitters for the Hartfords.

Capital City League Senior And Junior Action Limited

Umpires Fail to Report Due to Misunderstanding; Few Games Played Likely to Be Thrown Out; Meetings Are Scheduled.

DUE to a misunderstanding between the District Umpires Association and the secretary of the Capital City League, umpires failed to report to the fields for the various senior and junior games yesterday.

However, this did not halt the day's program entirely. Most of the clubs called in officials from the sidelines and staged their battles.

Several brilliantly played games were recorded including the pitching of a no-hit, no-run game by A. Geiger, of the Peerless Junior, with the Lindbergh Club his victim. The score was 9 to 0. However, his performance was dulled somewhat by the fact that the game was called on account of rain in the seventh inning.

The Crescents, making their debut in the Capital City League ranks, triumphed over the Terminal Ice Co. Nine on the West Ellipse before a large crowd. The score was 6 to 4.

The Moose Seniors, another new club, defeated the National Circles, 11 to 8, coming from behind to cut down a 7-2 lead.

Perhaps the most satisfied winning team of the day was the Aztecs, who were making their first start in the senior division after two years in junior circles. They beat the St. Martin's Club, 9 to 6. Lefty Fulmer was the hero, fanning twelve batter.

Just what action will be taken regarding the games played yesterday without official umpires has not been determined.

It is probable, however, that the games will be ordered replayed. In this event the teams would carry out the team schedule as was posted for yesterday next Sunday.

An important meeting of the insect and midget teams has been called for tomorrow night at The Post sports department at 8 o'clock. Managers or representatives of all teams are urged to be present.

The junior and senior clubs will hold a special meeting on Wednesday at The Post at 8 o'clock.

Keanes Win 4th Straight In Petworth League Race

Sport Marts Beaten, 8-1; Kanawhas Upset Tigers, 5-2; Tremonts Nose Out Yorke Preps, 5-4.

THE T. T. Keane Seniors continued on a march through the Petworth League by defeating the Sport Marts, 8 to 1, while the Kanawhas and the Tigers and the Tremonts and the Yorkes battled in close games. The Kanawhas downed the Tigers, 5 to 2, and the Tremonts nosed out the Yorkes, 5 to 4.

The victory for the Keanes was their fourth for the season in the Petworth League. Joe Freschi, pitching for the winners, was in rare form and set the Sport Marts down with three hits. He pitched a no-hit no-run game up until th eighth inning with no man getting beyond first base.

The Sport Marts then got to him for three hits to score a run. Only four men were on base, an error accounting for the other man. In addition, Freschi struck out eight men.

Mostorocco starred at bat for the winners with a single and a triple in two attempts.

Burke pitched a good game for the losers, allowing only eight hits and striking out the same number, but was ineffective in the pinches.

The Tremonts and the Yorkes staged the feature attraction of the day. The Tremonts won in the thirteenth inning when Shreve, who relieved McDonald, of the Yorkes, with two men on in the last inning, walked P. Ciango and then made a wild pitch, allowing Clark to score.

"Tack" Ensor, pitcher of the championship Tech. High School Team, although touched by the Yorkes for fourteen hits, pitched effectively with men on bases. He struck out twelve men.

Although Fales swung a big bat to drive in both the runs the Tigers scored his efforts could not break up a pitcher' battle between Sykes, of the Kanawhas, and Phipps, of the Tigers, the Kanawhas winning, 5 to 2. Sykes had the edge in the pitcher's duel. Kritt was a main cog in the winner's offensive, poling out two doubles.

INDIANS OPEN SERIES WITH NATS TOMORROW

ing the Nat list to these figures. Two college players, Dick Snelling and "Buddie" Dear are due to report this week but, unless they show themselves to be "boy wonders", they probably will come and go under option before the final pruning date.

Today is an open one on the Nationals' schedule, and they will spend it in needed practice at the Georgia Avenue Stadium, getting ready for the series with the Cleveland Indians, which opens tomorrow. Manager Harris plans to turn his pitching assignment over to Hollis Thurston tomorrow.

The Indians were not scheduled to play yesterday, while their Saturday's game was prevented by rain in Philadelphia, which means that, with the exception of the moundsmen used at the Quaker City this afternoon, Chief Jack McCallister will have any of his staff available.

Donohoe Motor Nine Beats District Heights

The Donohoe Motors broke the winning streak of the District Heights team in a loosely played game yesterday, winning 14 to 12.

McCauley, of the winners, pitched a fair game until the seventh inning, when the District Heights Team pounded him hard to score seven runs. He settled down, however, the last two innings and held the losers scoreless.

Colley and McCauley, of the winners, and Skillman, of the losers, connected for homers.

HOMER GIVES KENNEDYS VICTORY

Silver Spring Beaten in Upset; Simpson Is Hero.

ROGER SIMPSON'S terrific clout over the left field fence with a man on base in the seventh inning proved to be the deciding factor in the upset of the strong Silver Spring Team yesterday by the Kennedy A. C. by a 7-to-6 score. The game was played on the Wheaton diamond.

In the fifth Stevens became erratic and walked three men and Silver Spring combined three hits and two errors with the bases on balls to score five runs.

M'NAMEE TO ANNOUNCE RETURN OF LINDBERGH

Microphones May Be Placed Along Route Taken by Flier Saturday.

OPERA ON WRC TONIGHT

Anticipating the unusually elaborate plan of broadcasting the arrival of Capt. Charles A. Lindbergh, Graham McNamee, the well-known announcer, will come from New York, and if listening posts are established along the route of the parade from the navy yard to the Monument maybe five or six more New York announcers will be commandeered from the National Broadcasting Co., by Ralph Edmunds, manager of station WRC. If so, it will serve as a sort of dress rehearsal inasmuch as, following the Washington idea, it is the plan in New York to install microphones at the Battery and all along Broadway to the City Hall.

In Washington, if the continuous broadcasting idea is carried out, microphones will probably be placed at the navy yard, on top of the House Office Building, on the Post Office Department Building, on the Treasury and in front of the White House, if the procession passes that way; otherwise the next microphone to pick up the procession would be at the Monument Grounds, where the main exercises are to be held.

James Parker Coombs, better known to listeners as "Daddy Jim Coombs," of Roxy's Gang, will be the featured artist in tonight's broadcast over WRC at 6:30 o'clock. The name, "Daddy Jim," was bestowed upon Coombs by the members of the gang shortly after he joined that organization several years ago. A product of Brown University, he sang in the Glee Club, played with the Banjo Club, played cornet with the Brown Brass Band, directed chapel music for two years and took leading parts in dramatic productions.

For five seasons "Daddy Jim" was associated with a well known opera company, followed by five years as bass soloist at the New York Hippodrome. He then appeared in motion pictures for a while, returning to the Hippodrome for four years more. Roxy will present varied entertainment, utilizing the other members of the gang as supporting artists.

The Gypsies, a versatile string ensemble which has occupied the waves of associated stations of the red network, including WRC, on Monday evenings will bring their present radio series to a close tonight, starting at 8 o'clock. John Barnes Wells, lyric tenor, who has often appeared during this hour, will sing "Rose in June" and "A Red, Red Rose," as his portion of the presentation.

The one-act opera, "Cavalleria Rusticana," in tabloid form will be presented by the National Grand Opera Company through the red network, including WRC, at 9 o'clock. The production will be directed by Cesare Sodero.

"Cavalleria Rusticana" is a short story of swift action and tense emotion. It is one of the best librettos of all time, and it inspired Mascagni to his only notable achievement.

WOR will bring to the radio audience tonight at 7:30 o'clock a promising young operatic star, when Pauline Lawn, soprano, makes her radio debut. Born in Newark, N. J., not so many years ago, Miss Lawn went to Italy where she studied with Maestro Zuccani at Milan. She appeared in the opera "L'Amico Fritz," with such success that she was shortly thereafter taken to Florence, Italy, to sing the same opera under the baton of its composer, Mascagni.

Oratorios will come into their own over the air tonight when a chorus will sing selections from Handel's "Messiah," and Haydn's "Creation" from KOA at Denver, beginning at 6:15 o'clock, which is perhaps a trifle early for many local listeners to pick up.

The Texas Aggie Band Quartet will appear before the microphone of WBAP at 11:30 o'clock. Dancers will find interesting programs by turning their dials to WLW, at Cincinnati, at 10:30 o'clock; WPG, Atlantic City, at 10 o'clock; WRVA, Richmond, 11 o'clock, and WDAF, Kansas City, at 12:45 o'clock.

The first of two 24-hour short-wave transmission tests was put on the air from WGY Saturday night by the radio engineers of that station. Independent investigators are assisting the engineers in nearly every country in the world, and Navy observers at Pearl Harbor, Havana; Balboa, Canal Zone; Cavite, P. I.; Tutuila, Samoa; Guantanamo, Cuba; Guam, San Juan, P. R.; Cordova, Alaska, and Peking, China, also are cooperating.

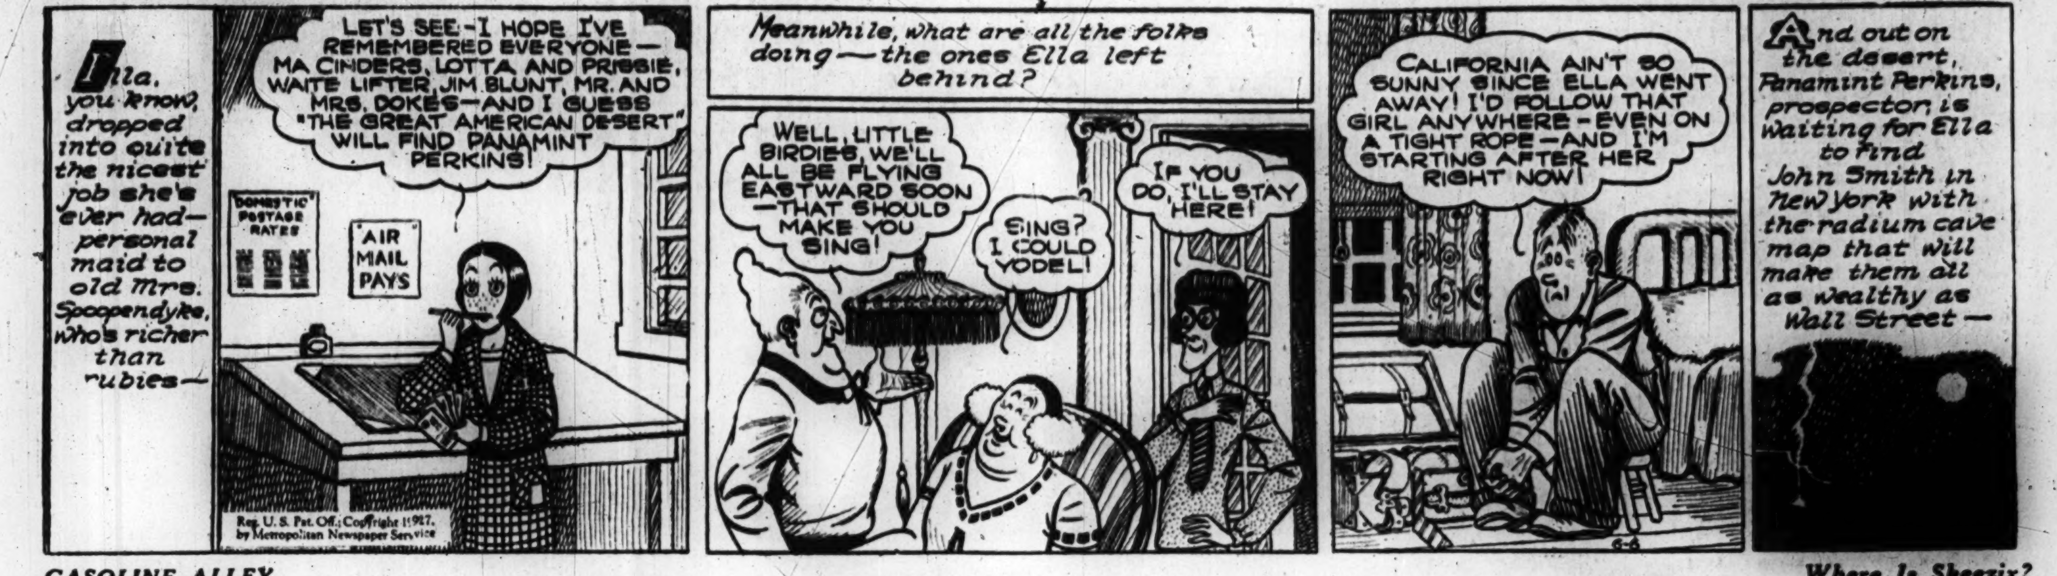
ELLA CINDERS—Wish You Were Here

By Bill Conselman and Charlie Plumb



Ella, you know, dropped into quite the nicest job she's ever had—personal maid to old Mrs. Spoopendyke, who's richer than rubies—
LET'S SEE - I HOPE I'VE REMEMBERED EVERYONE— MA CINDERS, LOTTA AND PRISSIE, WAITE LIFTER, JIM BLUNT, MR. AND MRS. DOKES—AND I GUESS "THE GREAT AMERICAN DESERT" WILL FIND PANAMINT PERKINS!
DOMESTIC POSTAGE RATES
AIR MAIL PAYS
Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.; Copyright 1927, by Metropolitan Newspaper Service
Meanwhile, what are all the folks doing — the ones Ella left behind?
WELL, LITTLE BIRDIES, WE'LL ALL BE FLYING EASTWARD SOON —THAT SHOULD MAKE YOU SING!
SING? I COULD YODEL!
IF YOU DO, I'LL STAY HERE!
CALIFORNIA AIN'T SO SUNNY SINCE ELLA WENT AWAY! I'D FOLLOW THAT GIRL ANYWHERE - EVEN ON A TIGHT ROPE —AND I'M STARTING AFTER HER RIGHT NOW!
6-6
And out on the desert, Panamint Perkins, prospector, is waiting for Ella to find John Smith in New York with the radium cave map that will make them all as wealthy as Wall Street—

WELL, FANS, YOUR BALLOTS AND LETTERS HAVE ALL BEEN CAREFULLY READ BY ED WHEELAN AND NOW DIRECTOR ART HOKUM WILL BROADCAST THE FINAL RESULTS FROM STATION WMMS — HELLO, EVERYBODY, I WANT FIRST TO ANNOUNCE THE FINAL STANDING OF OUR STARS IN THE POPULARITY CONTEST - DICK DARE AND HAZEL DEARIE RAN WAY AHEAD OF ALL THE OTHERS - FULLER PHUN AND RALPH McSNEER TIED FOR SECOND HONORS AMONG THE MEN!
TRICK HAT
BLANCHE ROUGE RECEIVED FAR MORE VOTES THAN LOTTA TALENT — ANDREW HANDY SHOWED THAT HE HAS PLENTY OF LOYAL ADMIRERS, BUT POOR ARCHIBALD CLUBB RECEIVED VERY FEW VOTES!! HE MAY HAVE TO BE DROPPED, UNLESS HIS FRIENDS, IF ANY, COME TO HIS RESCUE!
THE VOTING WAS ALMOST UNANIMOUS FOR LONG SERIALS — THE FAVORITE TYPE IS "WESTERN" — MYSTERY, ALASKAN, DESERT, PIRATE, SPORTS AND CIRCUS SERIALS ARE ALSO POPULAR!
NEARLY EVERY KIND WAS MENTIONED! TRAVELOGUES ARE NOT LIKED BY MANY OF THE FANS, AND CAPT. KIDDER HAS BEEN SO INFORMED — COMEDIES ARE POPULAR WITH MOST OF THE VOTERS. BUT THE "WHEELAN NEWS" DIDN'T SHOW UP SO WELL!!
SH-H-H QUIET PLEASE
MAYBE WE CANT PLEASE EVERYONE BUT, FANS, WE'RE GOING TO TRY IT - SO WATCH OUR SCREEN CLOSELY FROM NOW ON!! THIS IS STATION WMMS, (WHEELAN'S MINUTE MOVIE STUDIO) FOLLYWOOD, SIGNING OFF UNTIL NEXT WEEK!!

AT THE LOCAL THEATERS

METROPOLITAN

When men step out can their wives be expected not to be far behind? This is the burden of the moral of the "Cradle Snatchers," Broadway favorite for two years, starring for the week in film at the Metropolitan Theater with Louise Fazenda, Dorothy Phillips and J. Farrel MacDonald in the title roles.

Louise Fazenda furnishes the comedy for "Cradle Snatchers." From first to last she is in the Kleig, turning, twisting, grimacing in that inimitable way of hers which has made her a favorite with screen devotees these many years—not too many. It is she, once the die is cast to show the husbands a "thing or two," who steps out into the lead role, takes things in her own hands and leads the action to a happy denouement.

The story is that of three husbands who have acquired the flapper habit. The wives, discovering their preference, proceed to inveigle three youths to act as lovers to them at a party staged in the home of one. Before it is over the husbands drop in, and before the curtain drops they drop out again—sadder and wiser men betimes.

The vitaphone bill for the week is another delightful treat of the finest and best art that the stage has to offer—Beniamino Gigli and Marion Talley, tenor and soprano of the Metropolitan Opera company, respectively, in duets from Donizetti's opera "Lucia di Lammermoor," supplemented by Will Morrissey and Midgie Miller in the Morrissey and Miller Vitaphone Revue, a medley of song and dance numbers, engaging and entertaining. Gene Salzer's Orchestra is heard in the offing during the presentation of the revue.

A Metropolitan World Survey repeats the Lindbergh take-off at Roosevelt Field, this time in the person of Clarence Chamberlin and his passenger, Levine, Berlin—or Moscow—bound. The close of the survey presents a few snaps of Lindbergh in Paris at the city hall fete.

Daniel Breeskin's Orchestra renders as a selection for the week a group of favorite pieces, tuneful and endearing in the old-time memories recalled.

A good Aesop Fable rounds out the bill, which may be characterized as one good to make the visitor forget the summer heat.

EARLE

He buys well who buys at the Earle this week for from the opening concert number by Mr. Alexander Arons to the exit march far down the white strip of paper thrust feverishly in the outstretched hand of the expectant guest by the uniformed attendant the excellence of the bill is paramount.

Of the three features coheadlining the week's entertainment, Lynn Overman and company in "The Union Suit" receives top honors by virtue of a previous acquaintanceship with Washington theatergoers through stock appearance. This little domestic skit in itself, however, is rivaled for popularity by Dave Harris and company in "A Miniature Musical Comedy" in which the aforesaid Mr. Harris displays his remarkable musical adaptability, and presents to his audience a quartet of dancers and singers in a group of specialty numbers.

Max Cooper and Julius Rodello, in "A Strong Attempt," keep the audience in an uproar with their quiet and graceful comedy. Stan Stanley does a hot line from his seat in the audience and adds to the evening's merriment. Billy Beard, "The Party From the South," rounds out the personality of the bill with a bit of "inside stuff" on numerous subjects of interest and rolls from his loquacious tongue a number of popular songs.

The screen attraction for the week, "The Heart Thief," costarring Joseph Schildkraut and Lya de Putti, deals with a gambler, a noble and peasant girl. The film is strong, famously acted, and well deserves the characterization, "an outstanding picture." A Kinogram Special, featuring the take-off of Chamberlin and Levin in the Bellanca from Roosevelt Field on their transatlantic flight.

LITTLE THEATER

The work of the Motion Picture Guild, according to its program, is to bring out intellectual films. Yesterday at the Little Theater the guild kept that promise, for "The Living Dead Man," besides being a very amusing picture, is as subtle a satire as one could wish for.

This is the American premiere of the film, which is much sought after. It was produced in France, filmed in Monte Carlo, Rome, and a lovely Italian town, and directed by France's great motion picture expert, Marcel l'Herbier, whose work is famous in Europe. L'Herbier has translated a story by Luigi Pirandello, the noted playwright, to terms of the screen, and brought out not only its delightful comedy, but much delicious and esoteric satire.

It is this satire which some of the patrons yesterday at the Little Theater didn't seem to catch. They could understand the splendid settings, the obvious plot, and the more amusing incidents, but they couldn't get the wonderful way in which L'Herbier has interpreted the spirit of Pirandello and continental life, and the fact that Pirandello is laughing at not only his characters, but the audience. For this gentleman seems to delight in satirizing human emotions and human relations. He does this in "The Living Dead Man," and besides treats us to a story of a humorous youngster who wanted freedom, and got married instead.

The surrounding bill is extremely interesting for one film in particular, a microscopic picture of the infinitesimal beings in water. The Little Theater Trio plays in its usual excellent fashion.

RIALTO

"Love's Greatest Mistake," on the Rialto screen this week, is a well-cast and carefully directed picture, based on a story in a popular weekly, the only clear purpose of which is to show how mean, shallow and degrading certain flashy aspects of New York life can be. Those who find satisfaction in watching the glitter of expensive and ignoble ways of living will enjoy the film.

It tells the story of a beautiful and innocent but sufficiently knowing young woman who comes from a small city to visit her married sister in New York, with a natural eagerness for excitement as her main urge in life. The sister is false to her absent husband and vicious in her choice of friends, as evidenced by her lover, admirably played by the well-known William Powell. One of those kindly, suave, generous, and unmoral millionaires, portrayed true to the type by Frank Morgan, becomes very attentive to Honey, the visiting heroine, and she is also devotedly followed by a nice young architect played by James Hall.

Well, Honey takes every opportunity to put herself within reach of scandal, by her association with the financier, and when she has finally got mixed in a blackmail plot over some letters she is terribly hurt because the nice boy suspects her. That is the Great Mistake. He shouldn't have doubted her. In the end, by the merest twist of the thread of coincidence, she chooses the path of virtue. So one has a nice moral ending to make up for all the vicious and vacuous air he has been breathing.

Josephine Dunn is handsome and capable as Honey. Evelyn Brent is Sister Jane, and Iris Gray and Betty Byrne have other parts.

In the stage interlude Rudolph Malinoff and Catherine Gray combine muscle and grace in some novel feats of dancing and posing. The news pictures are up to the minute, showing complete views of Chamberlin's departure from Long Island Saturday morning. The comedy film, called "Jane, Sleuth," is nothing noticeable. The orchestra plays "reminiscences from Rose Marie," and Rox Rommel, the leader, interpolates a piano theme of his own composition for the feature film.

WARDMAN PARK

Last week's entire bill from the Little Theater is being shown by the Motion Picture Guild at the Wardman Park Theater.

The feature is "All for a Woman," which, although by no means the greatest film ever made, according to the guild, is mighty interesting. Leading its virtues are the characterizations of Emil Jannings, the finest of them all, and Werner Kraus. The story concerns some of the dramatic happenings of the French Revolution, and Janning plays Danton, that figure who was not afraid of anything, not even Robespierre, who finally arranged the execution. Kraus plays Robespierre like the artist he is, bringing that icy human back to life.

There are one or two tremendous scenes, in which the director shows the stupidity of the Parisian mobs. Also on the bill there are a Will Rogers comedy, a beautiful love story, "The Enchanted City," and an impressionistic camera novelty, "A Film Director's Nightmare." A well-picked orchestra plays.

SUICIDE PACT KEPT; COUPLE DIE TOGETHER

Wealthy Retired Grocer and Wife Found Dead, in a Last Embrace.

Special to The Washington Post.

New York, June 5 (By A. P.).—Wrapped in each other's arms, the bodies of George B. Underhill, 60, a wealthy retired grocer, and his wife, Jennie, 60, were found early today in their home in Brooklyn. They had carried out an apparently carefully planned suicide pact and they died as they had lived for 40 years together.

The woman had been shot twice through the chest, the bullets piercing the heart. The man was shot behind the right ear. It was obvious, detectives reported, that Underhill did the shooting.

Mrs. Anna Wallace, a neighbor, heard the shots shortly after 8 a. m. today. She summoned another neighbor and they entered the Underhill home. There, on the floor, attired in a white night gown, her head on a pillow, an expression of contentment on her face, lay Mrs. Underhill. She seemed to be smiling in her sleep.

On the floor beside her, with both arms thrown about her, his last instinctive gesture toward the one he loved, lay Underhill. The room otherwise was in perfect order.

FELLOWSHIP URGED BY EPWORTH PASTOR

Minister Observes His Eighth Anniversary of Coming to Congregation.

Closer fellowship amongst the members of the church was urged yesterday by the Rev. John Paul Tyler, pastor of the Epworth M. E. Church, in his sermon observing the eighth anniversary of his undertaking the pastorate of the church.

The pastor pointed out that the church had made tremendous strides since the time he first took over the reins of government. The membership has jumped from 350 to more than 1,100, and the Sunday school membership from 350 to more than 1,200.

When Dr. Tyler first went to the church, fresh from the duties of senior chaplain in the Eighty-second Division in France, he found a church building valued at $25,000. In 1919 this building burned down. The congregation rallied and raised the funds to build a $200,000 structure and a parsonage, both of which are nearly free of debt at present.

Balloonist Is Killed In Parachute Jump

East Providence, R. I., June 5 (By A. P.).—While hundreds of persons looked on, Ray Pyne, 37, of Boston, Mass., was killed at Crescent Park here today when the fourth of a series of parachutes with which he was jumping from a balloon failed to open.

He struck the ground feet first with tremendous force. It was estimated that he was 1,000 feet in the air when the parachute failed to open.

San Francisco Manila Flight Prize Offered

Manila, June 6 (By A. P.).—Stewart Tait, Manila business man and president and general manager of the Olympic Athletic Club of Manila, announced today that he and four other Manila men have agreed to post an offer of a prize of 25,000 pesos for the first flight between San Francisco and Manila.

The flight may be made in either direction.

PALACE

The Palace delivers Eddie Cantor's "Special Delivery" to its patrons, providing laugh after laugh in a clean, amusing and really good picture. With this collection of laughs the summer jazz week revel, including quite a few numbers, completes an extra fine bill.

Dave Harmon and his recording orchestra hold the stage with several jazz numbers, and combined in this act are Adler and Bradford, who do some really marvelous and spectacular dancing, and Rome and Dunn (late of Carroll's Vanities), two singers of merit.

A well-conceived and featured number is the orchestra overture, "Moonlight Nocturne," followed on the stage with "Under the Moon," sung by William Raymond, assisted by Miss Pauline Healy—two singers with good voices. The electrical lighting and floating screen pictures of this act are worthy of note.

Dick Liebert and Tom Gannon are always thinking up something new and novel. This week they give us an up-to-date novelty on the organ and with the orchestra—a travesty on Mr. Gallagher and Mr. Shean. They even wear the straw and the fez. It goes over big.

"Special Delivery" gives us a chance to shake off the blues—Eddie Cantor is a comedian; he has lost none of his popularity or ability by leaving the stage for pictures. While, of course, the story is impossible, yet it is a good vehicle to shake a little. Eddie has good support from Jobyna Ralston and William Powell, as well as Donald Keith, who plays the fireman. The comedy is fast moving, and brings out some new stunts for postmen to think about.

There's really not much plot to the story "Special Delivery"—it seems more the idea to see how much they can make you laugh. It succeeds.

Eddie Beagles (Cantor) in some way gets into the Secret Service of the Post Office Department as a mail carrier, and his father, who is an official, tells him not to come home till he makes good. And it's his adventures to make good and land a 'crook' that bring out the laughs. He captures the crook, a sweetheart and is taken back home.

Some excellent views of Chamberlin's hop-off, Lindbergh's reception in Paris, the Annapolis graduation, shown on Pathe Newsreel; Topics of the Day, and the orchestra overture complete the bill.

KEITH'S

In the tout ensemble, as they say in French, the bill at Keith's this week is by far the best general all-around vaudeville offering presented at the local house for many, many weeks. There is something to meet almost every taste—from low comedy to music of the higher realms; from the burlesque antics of Ann Suter, a Washington girl, to the aristocratic song recital of Eileen Stanley—one of the best, by the way, in all the realm of vaudeville.

The first act is of the circus type—a wire-walking performance with Tom and Betty Waters at their best. Then comes Pat Henning & Co.—mother, father, and son. Young Pat is a versatile fellow who dances, sings and strums stringed instruments. Further, he has a knack at comedy—and goes over big. The bill switched, Three Sailors—Bert Mason, Bob Robson, and Harry Blue—cavort in sheer nonsensical antics that wind up in a blaze of foolhardiness hard to beat.

Then, the big finale of the first part of the bill, Elsa Ersi and Joe Fejer, musical comedy star and violinist from Hungary, with what is undoubtedly the class act of the bill. They have numbers, songs, solos and duets, and Joe Fejer's Hungarian Orchestra is in the limelight all the while. An act out of the ordinary, with John Walsh, an Irish barytone, sharing the honors.

The second part of the bill is opened by Al Shean, of Gallagher and Shean fame, in a comedy skit, "Business is Business," wherein Mr. Shean is ably assisted by a former Greenwich Village Follies prima donna, Miss Lynn Canter, of pleasing voice and personality.

Ann Suter was welcomed back to her old home town with a plentitude of flowers, and a veritable ovation. She is still singing songs in her eccentric way. Last night she brought out another member of the family, her brother Tom, a singer.

The high spot on the program, however, is the simple, single act of Eileen Stanley, next to closing. Of all the singers who have been heard in vaudeville this one possesses the magic touch—and an array of songs that were encored and encored, time and time again, last night, until the audience, seemingly, could not bear enough of Eileen Stanley.

The closing act is an old favorite—Torino, master juggler, assisted by Doris Whiteley. The usual house features—Pathe News, showing the start of the Chamberlin flight—Topics of the Day, and Fred Clark's orchestra recital, complete the program.

COLUMBIA

"Mr. Wu," costarring Lon Chaney and Renee Adoree, is a powerful tragedy, excellent throughout, complete in its minutest detail to Chinese customs and traditions, and probably the best picture seen here this season from the viewpoint of dramatic art. The weird Chinese theme of the orchestral accompaniment, the fact that all the minor characters are obviously Chinese, and the Chinese settings create and hold unwaveringly the Chinese atmosphere.

"Mr. Wu" is drama in its highest caste. There are intense moments of emotion—of love between a Chinese maiden and an American youth, violating the Chinese custom, and the tragic moments with Wu, struggling for courage to carry out the traditions of his race and country, as well as the tragic moments of a mother forced to decide the fate of her son and daughter.

Lon Chaney—"The Man of a Million Faces"—comes back into his own from the by-path of "Tell It to the Marines." His grip on tragic, stern reality is perhaps more steady.

In "Mr. Wu," Chaney is the grandfather, a man, and also the father—three characters. His greatest character acting is done as the grandfather, in which the make-up and mannerisms are perfect. Renee Adoree triumphs as the Chinese maiden, Ning Pang. Louise Dresser is another "mother," but only once has an opportunity to display her real self. Ralph Forbes, Gertrude Olmstead and Anna May Wong have important supporting roles. There is but one instance of humor—much appreciated—because of its cleverness.

"Mr. Wu" is briefly the story of the romance of an American youth with a Chinese maiden and its tragic consequence. Wu, as the Chinese father, following the tradition of his country, is forced to sacrifice the life of his beloved daughter, and then seeks revenge against the American youth (who, he claims, has despoiled the daughter) and the youth's parents. Brought into the Chinese chamber, the mother is shown the daughter in a room with one of the natives and the son in a courtyard lashed to a tree, both awaiting the signal from the Mandarin Wu for the punishment to be meted out to them. It is here that the mother must decide their fate.

A real good comedy, "Breezing Along," an Aesop fable, "Hard Cider," Pathe News, with some fine scenes of Lindberg's welcome in Paris and elsewhere, Chamberlin's hop-off, the Annapolis graduation, and other views complete the bill.

AT THE LOCAL THEATERS

METROPOLITAN

When men step out can their wives be expected not to be far behind? This is the burden of the moral of the "Cradle Snatchers," Broadway favorite for two years, starring for the week in film at the Metropolitan Theater with Louise Fazenda, Dorothy Phillips and J. Farrel MacDonald in the title roles.

Louise Fazenda furnishes the comedy for "Cradle Snatchers." From first to last she is in the Kleig, turning, twisting, grimacing in that inimitable way of hers which has made her a favorite with screen devotees these many years—not too many. It is she, once the die is cast to show the husbands a "thing or two," who steps out into the lead role, takes things in her own hands and leads the action to a happy denouement.

The story is that of three husbands who have acquired the flapper habit. The wives, discovering their preference, proceed to inveigle three youths to act as lovers to them at a party staged in the home of one. Before it is over the husbands drop in, and before the curtain drops they drop out again—sadder and wiser men betimes.

The vitaphone bill for the week is another delightful treat of the finest and best art that the stage has to offer—Beniamino Gigli and Marion Talley, tenor and soprano of the Metropolitan Opera company, respectively, in duets from Donizetti's opera "Lucia di Lammermoor," supplemented by Will Morrissey and Midgie Miller in the Morrissey and Miller Vitaphone Revue, a medley of song and dance numbers, engaging and entertaining. Gene Salzer's Orchestra is heard in the offing during the presentation of the revue.

A Metropolitan World Survey repeats the Lindbergh take-off at Roosevelt Field, this time in the person of Clarence Chamberlin and his passenger, Levine, Berlin—or Moscow—bound. The close of the survey presents a few snaps of Lindbergh in Paris at the city hall fete.

Daniel Breeskin's Orchestra renders as a selection for the week a group of favorite pieces, tuneful and endearing in the old-time memories recalled.

A good Aesop Fable rounds out the bill, which may be characterized as one good to make the visitor forget the summer heat.

EARLE

He buys well who buys at the Earle this week for from the opening concert number by Mr. Alexander Arons to the exit march far down the white strip of paper thrust feverishly in the outstretched hand of the expectant guest by the uniformed attendant the excellence of the bill is paramount.

Of the three features coheadlining the week's entertainment, Lynn Overman and company in "The Union Suit" receives top honors by virtue of a previous acquaintanceship with Washington theatergoers through stock appearance. This little domestic skit in itself, however, is rivaled for popularity by Dave Harris and company in "A Miniature Musical Comedy" in which the aforesaid Mr. Harris displays his remarkable musical adaptability, and presents to his audience a quartet of dancers and singers in a group of specialty numbers.

Max Cooper and Julius Rodello, in "A Strong Attempt," keep the audience in an uproar with their quiet and graceful comedy. Stan Stanley does a hot line from his seat in the audience and adds to the evening's merriment. Billy Beard, "The Party From the South," rounds out the personality of the bill with a bit of "inside stuff" on numerous subjects of interest and rolls from his loquacious tongue a number of popular songs.

The screen attraction for the week, "The Heart Thief," costarring Joseph Schildkraut and Lya de Putti, deals with a gambler, a noble and peasant girl. The film is strong, famously acted, and well deserves the characterization, "an outstanding picture." A Kinogram Special, featuring the take-off of Chamberlin and Levin in the Bellanca from Roosevelt Field on their transatlantic flight.

LITTLE THEATER

The work of the Motion Picture Guild, according to its program, is to bring out intellectual films. Yesterday at the Little Theater the guild kept that promise, for "The Living Dead Man," besides being a very amusing picture, is as subtle a satire as one could wish for.

This is the American premiere of the film, which is much sought after. It was produced in France, filmed in Monte Carlo, Rome, and a lovely Italian town, and directed by France's great motion picture expert. Marcel l'Herbier, whose work is famous in Europe. L'Herbier has translated a story by Luigi Pirandello, the noted playwright, to terms of the screen, and brought out not only its delightful comedy, but much delicious and esoteric satire.

It is this satire which some of the patrons yesterday at the Little Theater didn't seem to catch. They could understand the splendid settings, the obvious plot, and the more amusing incidents, but they couldn't get the wonderful way in which L'Herbier has interpreted the spirit of Pirandello and continental life, and the fact that Pirandello is laughing at not only his characters, but the audience. For this gentleman seems to delight in satiring human emotions and human relations. He does this in "The Living Dead Man," and besides treats us to a story of a humorous youngster who wanted freedom, and got married instead.

The surrounding bill is extremely interesting for one film in particular, a microscopic picture of the infinitesimal beings in water. The Little Theater Trio plays in its usual excellent fashion.

RIALTO

"Love's Greatest Mistake," on the Rialto screen this week, is a well-cast and carefully directed picture, based on a story in a popular weekly, the only clear purpose of which is to show how mean, shallow and degrading certain flashy aspects of New York life can be. Those who find satisfaction in watching the glitter of expensive and ignoble ways of living will enjoy the film.

It tells the story of a beautiful and innocent but sufficiently knowing young woman who comes from a small city to visit her married sister in New York, with a natural eagerness for excitement as her main urge in life. The sister is false to her absent husband and vicious in her choice of friends, as evidenced by her lover, admirably played by the well-known William Powell. One of those kindly, suave, generous, and unmoral millionaires, portrayed true to the type by Frank Morgan, becomes very attentive to Honey, the visiting heroine, and she is also devotedly followed by a nice young architect played by James Hall.

Well, Honey takes every opportunity to put herself within reach of scandal, by her association with the financier, and when she has finally got mixed in a blackmail plot over some letters she is terribly hurt because the nice boy suspects her. That is the Great Mistake. He shouldn't have doubted her. In the end, by the merest twist of the thread of coincidence, she chooses the path of virtue. So one has a nice moral ending to make up for all the vicious and vacuous air he has been breathing.

Josephine Dunn is handsome and capable as Honey. Evelyn Brent is Sister Jane, and Iris Gray and Betty Byrne have other parts.

In the stage interlude Rudolph Malinoff and Catherine Gray combine muscle and grace in some novel feats of dancing and posing. The news pictures are up to the minute, showing complete views of Chamberlin's departure from Long Island Saturday morning. The comedy film, called "Jane, Sleuth," is nothing noticeable. The orchestra plays "reminiscences from Rose Marie," and Rox Rommel, the leader, interpolates a piano theme of his own composition for the feature film.

WARDMAN PARK

Last week's entire bill from the Little Theater is being shown by the Motion Picture Guild at the Wardman Park Theater.

The feature is "All for a Woman," which, although by no means the greatest film ever made, according to the guild, is mighty interesting. Leading its virtues are the characterizations of Emil Jannings, the finest of them all, and Werner Kraus. The story concerns some of the dramatic happenings of the French Revolution, and Janning plays Danton, that figure who was not afraid of anything, not even Robespierre, who finally arranged the execution. Kraus plays Robespierre like the artist he is, bringing that icy human back to life.

There are one or two tremendous scenes, in which the director shows the stupidity of the Parisian mobs. Also on the bill there are a Will Rogers comedy, a beautiful love story, "The Enchanted City," and an impressionistic camera novelty, "A Film Director's Nightmare." A well-picked orchestra plays.

SUICIDE PACT KEPT; COUPLE DIE TOGETHER

Wealthy Retired Grocer and Wife Found Dead, in a Last Embrace.

Special to The Washington Post.

New York, June 5 (By A. P.).—Wrapped in each other's arms, the bodies of George B. Underhill, 60, a wealthy retired grocer, and his wife, Jennie, 60, were found early today in their home in Brooklyn. They had carried out an apparently carefully planned suicide pact and they died as they had lived for 40 years together.

The woman had been shot twice through the chest, the bullets piercing the heart. The man was shot behind the right ear. It was obvious, detectives reported, that Underhill did the shooting.

Mrs. Anna Wallace, a neighbor, heard the shots shortly after 8 a. m. today. She summoned another neighbor and they entered the Underhill home. There, on the floor, attired in a white night gown, her head on a pillow, an expression of contentment on her face, lay Mrs. Underhill. She seemed to be smiling in her sleep.

On the floor beside her, with both arms thrown about her, his last instinctive gesture toward the one he loved, lay Underhill. The room otherwise was in perfect order.

FELLOWSHIP URGED BY EPWORTH PASTOR

Minister Observes His Eighth Anniversary of Coming to Congregation.

Closer fellowship amongst the members of the church was urged yesterday by the Rev. John Paul Tyler, pastor of the Epworth M. E. Church, in his sermon observing the eighth anniversary of his undertaking the pastorate of the church.

The pastor pointed out that the church had made tremendous strides since the time he first took over the reins of government. The membership has jumped from 350 to more than 1,100, and the Sunday school membership from 350 to more than 1,200.

When Dr. Tyler first went to the church, fresh from the duties of senior chaplain in the Eighty-second Division in France, he found a church building valued at $25,000. In 1919 this building burned down. The congregation rallied and raised the funds to build a $200,000 structure and a parsonage, both of which are nearly free of debt at present.

Balloonist Is Killed In Parachute Jump

East Providence, R. I., June 5 (By A. P.).—While hundreds of persons looked on, Ray Pyne, 37, of Boston, Mass., was killed at Crescent Park here today when the fourth of a series of parachutes with which he was jumping from a balloon failed to open.

He struck the ground feet first with tremendous force. It was estimated that he was 1,000 feet in the air when the parachute failed to open.

San Francisco Manila Flight Prize Offered

Manila, June 6 (By A. P.).—Stewart Tait, Manila business man and president and general manager of the Olympic Athletic Club of Manila, announced today that he and four other Manila men have agreed to post an offer of a prize of 25,000 pesos for the first flight between San Francisco and Manila.

The flight may be made in either direction.

PALACE

The Palace delivers Eddie Cantor's "Special Delivery" to its patrons, providing laugh after laugh in a clean, amusing and really good picture. With this collection of laughs the summer jazz week revel, including quite a few numbers, completes an extra fine bill.

Dave Harmon and his recording orchestra hold the stage with several jazz numbers, and combined in this act are Adler and Bradford, who do some really marvelous and spectacular dancing, and Rome and Dunn (late of Carroll's Vanities), two singers of merit.

A well-conceived and featured number is the orchestra overture, "Moonlight Nocturne," followed on the stage with "Under the Moon," sung by William Raymond, assisted by Miss Pauline Healy—two singers with good voices. The electrical lighting and floating screen pictures of this act are worthy of note.

Dick Liebert and Tom Gannon are always thinking up something new and novel. This week they give us an up-to-date novelty on the organ and with the orchestra—a travesty on Mr. Gallagher and Mr. Shean. They even wear the straw and the fez. It goes over big.

"Special Delivery" gives us a chance to shake off the blues—Eddie Cantor is a comedian; he has lost none of his popularity or ability by leaving the stage for pictures. While, of course, the story is impossible, yet it is a good vehicle to shake a little. Eddie has good support from Jobyna Ralston and William Powell, as well as Donald Keith, who plays the fireman. The comedy is fast moving, and brings out some new stunts for postmen to think about.

There's really not much plot to the story "Special Delivery"—it seems more the idea to see how much they can make you laugh. It succeeds.

Eddie Beagles (Cantor) in some way gets into the Secret Service of the Post Office Department as a mail carrier, and his father, who is an official, tells him not to come home till he makes good. And it's his adventures to make good and land a 'crook' that bring out the laughs. He captures the crook, a sweetheart and is taken back home.

Some excellent views of Chamberlin's hop-off, Lindbergh's reception in Paris, the Annapolis graduation, shown on Pathe Newsreel; Topics of the Day, and the orchestra overture complete the bill.

KEITH'S

In the tout ensemble, as they say in French, the bill at Keith's this week is by far the best general all-around vaudeville offering presented at the local house for many, many weeks. There is something to meet almost every taste—from low comedy to music of the higher realms; from the burlesque antics of Ann Suter, a Washington girl, to the aristocratic song recital of Eileen Stanley—one of the best, by the way, in all the realm of vaudeville.

The first act is of the circus type—a wire-walking performance with Tom and Betty Waters at their best. Then comes Pat Henning & Co.—mother, father, and son. Young Pat is a versatile fellow who dances, sings and strums stringed instruments. Further, he has a knack at comedy—and goes over big. The bill switched, Three Sailors—Bert Mason, Bob Robson, and Harry Blue—cavort in sheer nonsensical antics that wind up in a blaze of foolhardiness hard to beat.

Then, the big finale of the first part of the bill, Elsa Ersi and Joe Fejer, musical comedy star and violinist from Hungary, with what is undoubtedly the class act of the bill. They have numbers, songs, solos and duets, and Joe Fejer's Hungarian Orchestra is in the limelight all the while. An act out of the ordinary, with John Walsh, an Irish barytone, sharing the honors.

The second part of the bill is opened by Al Shean, of Gallagher and Shean fame, in a comedy skit, "Business is Business," wherein Mr. Shean is ably assisted by a former Greenwich Village Follies prima donna, Miss Lynn Canter, of pleasing voice and personality.

Ann Suter was welcomed back to her old home town with a plentitude of flowers, and a veritable ovation. She is still singing songs in her eccentric way. Last night she brought out another member of the family, her brother Tom, a singer.

The high spot on the program, however, is the simple, single act of Eileen Stanley, next to closing. Of all the singers who have been heard in vaudeville this one possesses the magic touch—and an array of songs that were encored and encored, time and time again, last night, until the audience, seemingly, could not hear enough of Eileen Stanley.

The closing act is an old favorite—Torino, master juggler, assisted by Doris Whiteley. The usual house features—Pathe News, showing the start of the Chamberlin flight—Topics of the Day, and Fred Clark's orchestra recital, complete the program.

COLUMBIA

"Mr. Wu," costarring Lon Chaney and Renee Adoree, is a powerful tragedy, excellent throughout, complete in its minutest detail to Chinese customs and traditions, and probably the best picture seen here this season from the viewpoint of dramatic art. The weird Chinese theme of the orchestral accompaniment, the fact that all the minor characters are obviously Chinese, and the Chinese settings create and hold unwaveringly the Chinese atmosphere.

"Mr. Wu" is drama in its highest caste. There are intense moments of emotion—of love between a Chinese maiden and an American youth, violating the Chinese custom, and the tragic moments with Wu, struggling for courage to carry out the traditions of his race and country, as well as the tragic moments of a mother forced to decide the fate of her son and daughter.

Lon Chaney—"The Man of a Million Faces"—comes back into his own from the by-path of "Tell It to the Marines." His grip on tragic, stern reality is perhaps more steady.

In "Mr. Wu," Chaney is the grandfather, a man, and also the father—three characters. His greatest character acting is done as the grandfather, in which the make-up and mannerisms are perfect. Renee Adoree triumphs as the Chinese maiden, Ning Pang. Louise Dresser is another "mother," but only once has an opportunity to display her real self. Ralph Forbes, Gertrude Olmstead and Anna May Wong have important supporting roles. There is but one instance of humor—much appreciated—because of its cleverness.

"Mr. Wu" is briefly the story of the romance of an American youth with a Chinese maiden and its tragic consequence. Wu, as the Chinese father, following the tradition of his country, is forced to sacrifice the life of his beloved daughter, and then seeks revenge against the American youth (who, he claims, has despoiled the daughter) and the youth's parents. Brought into the Chinese chamber, the mother is shown the daughter in a room with one of the natives and the son in a courtyard lashed to a tree, both awaiting the signal from the Mandarin Wu for the punishment to be meted out to them. It is here that the mother must decide their fate.

A real good comedy, "Breezing Along," an Aesop fable, "Hard Cider," Pathe News, with some fine scenes of Lindbergh's welcome in Paris and elsewhere, Chamberlin's hop-off, the Annapolis graduation, and other views complete the bill.

MADHOUSE KILLING MYSTERY BAFFLES EFFORTS OF POLICE

Coroner's Jury to Pass Upon Strange Death of St. Elizabeths Patient Today.

LIFELESS BODY FOUND IN HOSPITAL GROUNDS

Many Inmates Near as Chris Panturis Met Death; One Under Guard.

Police yesterday failed to pierce the veil of mystery surrounding the death of Chris Panturis, 36 years old, insane patient at St. Elizabeths Hospital. A coroner's jury will convene today at 11:30 o'clock in the District morgue and attempt to determine how the man met his death. The fatality is one of the strangest in the recent history of Washington.

All that is known definitely is that Panturis died of a broken skull. The injury, physicians declared, was evidently inflicted by a blunt instrument. Yet thorough search of the vicinity of the death scene failed to disclose any instrument which could have been employed in killing the man.

The lifeless body of Panturis was found in broad daylight, 2:30 o'clock Saturday morning, lying on the green expanse of lawn in front of the Administration Building. Many patients, who are allowed the freedom of the grounds, were in the vicinity. Yet there was none who saw Panturis fall or saw him beaten.

Detectives from police headquarters and the Eleventh precinct investigated the case and frankly admitted they were baffled. Edward Kelly, one of the murder specialists of the Detective Bureau, was one of the investigators. He said yesterday that he had no clew.

Inmate Held Under Guard.

Two women, their minds ill and weak, who were housed in a building near the death scene, reported to Dr. Arthur Noyes, assistant superintendent of the hospital, that they saw a bearded man steal up behind Panturis and club him with a heavy wooden bludgeon. Their description indicated Joseph Napolini, 53 years old, also a patient. The stories were told in apparent lucid manner.

Napolini was brought before the two women. Not only did they fail to identify him but stoutly denied telling of seeing Panturis clubbed. Nevertheless Napolini is to be held under strict guard pending the inquest.

The police investigators, besides Kelly, included George Darnall, of headquarters; Lieut. J. F. McCormick, Detectives C. A. Berry and Thomas Hayes, of the Eleventh precinct. The police are confident that the man was slain but doubt that the strange case will ever be solved. Dr. J. Ramsay Nevitt, District coroner, will preside over the inquest today.

He received his early Treasury training under S. Parker Gilbert, former Undersecretary of the Treasury and now agent general of reparations. He also served under Gilbert's successors, Garrard B. Winston and Ogden L. Mills.

Boy, Given Auto Ride, Takes Woman's Purse

Mrs. M. W. Godey, 1422 Monroe street northwest, essayed the role of the "Good Samaritan" yesterday and lost. She told police of the Eighth precinct that while she was driving along Rhode Island avenue northeast, a boy, about 14 years old, hailed her and requested a ride.

She complied with his request and drove him from Mount Rainier to North Capitol street. Shortly after he had thanked her for the ride and disappeared, she noticed her purse containing approximately $4 in bills, important papers and keys was missing.

REV. A. E. BARROWS RETURNS TO PULPIT AFTER CHURCH ROW

Pastor, Center of Dissension in Congregation, Greeted by 200 Members.

CROWDS IN DISORDER AT MORNING SERVICE

Minister's Opponents Threaten Misconduct Charges Before Capital Presbytery.

Returning to the pulpit of the Eastern Presbyterian Church, Sixth street and Maryland avenue northeast, after an absence of three months, the Rev. Alfred E. Barrows, D. D., pastor and center of dissensions within the congregation, officiated at services yesterday morning. More than 200 members of the church filled the spacious edifice, and, by their presence, gave mute testimony of the esteem with which they hold their pastor.

When Dr. Barrows ascended the pulpit at 11 o'clock, he found the altar banked with floral greetings from members of the church. The services were marked with simplicity and serenity. The keynote, sounded by the pastor, was "forgive and be forgiven." The sermon, the topic of which was "Seeing the Invisible," dealt with faith.

The singing of hymns, led by Dr. Barrows, was unusually spirited. The minister declared in his sermon that the only way to see God was by fidelity.

There was confusion and disorder in the vestibule of the church following the service. This was brought on by the scores of men, women and children church members crowding about Dr. Barrows to shake his hand and welcome him back to the church. Officers of the congregation declared they counted more than a score of persons, who are opposed to Dr. Barrows continuing as pastor.

Accused of Misconduct.

Three months ago, at the request of church officers, Dr. Barrows went on a vacation. Dissension was rife among members of the congregation, some of whom accused the pastor of misconduct. During the absence of Dr. Barrows, the dissension grew and it was decided to hold a meeting to consider requesting the resignation of the pastor.

Nine days ago sides for and against the pastor were taken and excitement was at a high pitch. Following the meeting a street brawl occurred, which resulted in a riot call for police. For participation in the melee two men were fined in Police Court Friday.

Opponents of the pastor declared they will bring charges of conduct unbecoming a minister against Dr. Barrows at the meeting of the Washington Presbytery, the Church governing body, which will convene at 7:30 o'clock a week from today in the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church. Dr. Henry Tolson, moderator of the body, declared that he has received no charges against the pastor. Supporters of Dr. Barrows, who are in the majority in the congregation, expressed doubt as to whether the charges would be made and pledged support to Dr. Barrows if accusations were made.

A throng which rivaled those at the morning services in numbers heard the Rev. Mr. Barrows preach on "Knowing Christ," last night at the church.

S. EDDY ADDRESSES HOWARD GRADUATES AT BACCALAUREATE

Y. M. C. A. Secretary for Asia Advocates Moral Suasion in Talk to Students.

DECLARES U. S. POLICIES FEARED BY ALL NATIONS

Speaker Describes Labor Conditions in China as the Worst in World.

The baccalaureate sermon to more than 300 graduates of nine colleges of Howard University was preached yesterday in the gymnasium-armory hall by Sherwood Eddy, international secretary for Asia of the Young Men's Christian Association. An academic procession marched from the library hall, headed by the university choir. The invocation was said by the Rev. H. B. Taylor, of the Fifteenth Street Presbyterian Church.

The speaker was introduced by the university president, Dr. Mordecai W. Johnson, as one who had spent 30 years in China, India, Korea, Japan and Russia. He advocated the philosophy of moral suasion as opposed to the doctrine of "might makes right," stating that the latter philosophy has left a sorry world of class, racial and national strife—"a world of imperialism where the strong have gone out to profit by labors of the weak."

After citing Holland's empire as 57 times that of the Netherlands, and Great Britain's as 110 times that of England, he depicted the creditor nation, America, as the most dreaded of all because of her undetermined economic and financial policies.

Battle Loss Cited.

Under the philosophy of might he cited loss of manhood on the battlefields of France, and loss of womanhood and childhood as evidenced by war mothers and orphans of Europe.

Labor conditions in China were described as the worst in the world, but Sun Yat-Yen was cited as the Washington of that nation in establishing independence and freedom for its people. Change of the old order in India, ple. Change of the old order in India, policies, saying that the Indians would already have won their freedom had their faith in Ghandi been complete.

Citing the policy of the party in power in Russia today, he said that very little liberty existed there as understood by Americans, the press not being free, and the communists expecting the world to be reformed by revolutionary force, rather than by moral suasion.

In the final charge, he urged the graduates to be constructive, to adopt an intelligent religion as the dynamic of success, and to seek to break down the racial prejudices of India, Germany, Britain and America by moral forces rather than strife. The benediction was said by the Rev. E. B. Watson.

Finding of Somerset Murderer Doubted

Doubt that the murderer of William Ross, 69-year-old night watchman, killed May 28 in his tool shack near Somerset, Md., will ever be apprehended, was expressed yesterday by State's Attorney Robert Peter, jr., Policemen Lawrence Clagett and Joseph Oldfield and Detective John Manning, of Baltimore, who have been investigating the case.

The case has not been abandoned, however, officials announced. The investigators have been handicapped in not having a clew of any kind on which to work. They are understood to agree that chances of pinning the crime on the guilty person are slim, unless the murderer makes a mistake which might attract attention to him.

Hammer Bonds Fail To Release Accused

Dr. Dee Hammer, alleged murder conspirator, yesterday spent another day in the smallpox quarantined District jail through failure to raise $10,000 bond. He and Mrs. Anna Apolonio were arrested a week ago and accused of conspiring to murder Joseph Apolonio, the woman's husband.

The two will be given a hearing in Police Court Thursday. Mrs. Apolonio is free in $5,000 bond, which was raised by her husband, who refuses to believe his wife was implicated in a plot to kill him. Relatives and friends of Dr. Hammer raised $10,000 in real estate bonds Saturday for his release but the securities were refused by Assistant District Attorney Ralph Given on the ground that the property was encumbered.
